Geneva Arbiters Fail in Attempts To Prevent War

Committee Is Unable to Bring Ethiopia and Italy Together.

Aloisi Is Adamant On His Ultimatum

All Eyes Fixed on Hoare, Who Delivers Speech to League Today.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Geneva, Sept. 10.—Premier Benito Mussolini's battering-ram diplomacy had the League of Nations' peace efforts hanging on the ropes tonight.

The League Council's committee of five was reported ready to submit a report virtually counting itself out of the peace picture.

Chairman Salvador Madariaga, of Spain, failed in an effort to bring Italy and Ethiopia together. He conferred with Baron Pompeo Aloisi, of Italy, and Tekla Hawariat, of Ethiopia, at length.

Madariaga confessed his conversations with Aloisi had been "far from satisfactory." No common ground could be found between the committee's compromise proposals and Mussolini's East African ambitions, it was disclosed authoritatively.

Report Due This Week.

The committee, which started out with high hope of success within a week, now is prepared to report to the council "without benefit of Baron Aloisi's collaboration," the United Press learned.

The report probably will be formulated after the committee's meeting Thursday. The representatives of Britain, France, Poland, Spain and Turkey will gather then to consider the speech of British Foreign Minister Sir Samuel Hoare to the League Assembly, now scheduled for Wednesday.

The bleak picture of peace prospects—opening the possibility not only of war in East Africa, but of conflict in Europe and disruption of the League—was revealed tonight after the committee of five had met from 5 to 6:30 p. m. to hear Chairman Madariaga outline the disastrous nature of his conversations with Aloisi and Hawariat.

Diplomats Hold Parley.

Nobody knows yet what Madariaga offered Mussolini, but it is believed to have been a deal along these lines: Collective mandate over Ethiopia under League blessing; international policing of border outlaws and economic concessions to Italy.

Aloisi was believed to have repeated the ultimatum issued in Rome last night that Italy will not

Grant Defeats Donald Budge At Forest Hills

Tiny Georgian Giant-Killer Cuts Down Californian in Brilliant Battle.

By the United Press.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Standing scarcely a thumb's length better than 5 feet, and weighing so little he can be measured in karats, Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Peachtree street, Atlanta, added his name to the roll call of tennis giant-killers today when, scampering about the Forest Hills turf like an enraged jackrabbit, he defeated famed Donald Budge, of California, 6—4, 6—4, 5—7, 6—3, in a quarter-final round match of the Men's National Singles championship.

The match, which sent the little Georgian into the semifinals and the crowd into hysterics, was started yesterday, but was halted by a storm after Grant had won the first two sets and was leading 2-1 in the third. It was at this point that the half-pint and the red-head started today. Budge's constituents (and they were very limited in number) breathed a sigh of relief when the Californian, fighting gamely and playing brilliantly, won the third set today, for they believed he had passed the crisis.

Grant Bears Down.

But their joy was short-lived. Undisturbed by the fact that he had lost the set after being within 3 points of it in the tenth game, Grant hitched up his dirty duck pants, took a swipe at his straggly mop of hair, and went to work on the man the critics said was the finest tennis player in the land.

And once to work, Grant didn't take long. Nine games later Budge, his face a study in worry, banged a backhand into the net for the final point, and the little Georgian, throwing his racquet high into the air, sounded the rebel yell as he dashed joyously to the net to console the loser. Grant didn't yell alone. As a man, the crowd of 2,500 rose in their seats and, forgetting their dignity, whooped it up with him. Hundreds of the more enthusiastic customers showered the bright green court with cushions and hats.

Grant's victory placed him in the round of four, a peg or two higher than he has ever advanced in the Nationals, and tomorrow he will engage Sidney B. Wood, New York internationalist, in the opening semifinal.

The winner of this match will play the winner of the duel between Fred Perry, of England, and

Bridge Plunge Is Fatal to Girl

Mary Alice Herbert, 19, Had Been Despondent, Mother Reveals.

Plunging 85 feet from the Sixteenth Street Bridge to Piney Branch parkway below, Miss Mary Alice Herbert, 19-year-old daughter of Thomas G. Herbert, general superintendent of the Smoot Sand and Gravel Co., was killed yesterday.

The pretty brunette died at Walter Reed Hospital of internal injuries and multiple fractures. When she struck the ground, she narrowly missed falling on a slumbering 10-year-old boy and his dog.

Police said William J. Slattery, 4900 block Seventh street, and Charles L. Wilcox, 1500 block D street, saw her fall.

Miss Herbert had been in ill health and highly nervous for several days, Mrs. Herbert, arriving at the hospital a few minutes after the girl's death, told physicians.

"She appeared despondent lately," Mrs. Herbert said.

First identification of Miss Herbert came through a card, bearing her name and address, found in her pocket at the hospital.

The victim, who lived with her parents at 1519 Webster street, plunged from the center of the bridge, her body striking the middle of a dirt road on the parkway.

About 15 feet from the spot where Miss Herbert struck slept David Russell Lehman, 3700 block Ninth street, who had gone for a walk in the woods with his dog.

"I suppose I was still asleep, but just the same I heard a scream," he told police.

"Then I was down on the ground on top of my dog, Shep, and he was biting my arm. First thing I saw was the girl hitting the ground."

Miss Herbert, who was graduated from Central High School last June, is survived by her parents and a brother, Thomas.

Nazi Schools Barred to All Jewish Pupils

Race, Not Creed, Basis of Action Effective Next Easter.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Sept. 10.—Nazis "purged" their public schools today by ordering Jewish children to get out.

Bernard Rust, Prussia's commissioner for culture and education, chose the opening of the Nazi Party convention at Nurnberg to announce that Jewish school children between the ages of 6 and 14 must leave by next Easter.

Separate public schools which the Jewish children must attend will be opened on that date. The decree ordering the preparations said all pure German schools must be free "from Jewish and foreign influences."

Rust emphasized that previous attempts to segregate the Jews solely on the basis of church affiliation had not proved successful and said whether a Jew is a member of a synagogue or not he will be classified as Jewish.

This decree, said an official commentary, is taken "with the full accord of the Nazi racial policy office (of which Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, leader of the Nazi pagan faith movement, is chief) and signifies a further advance in racial laws.

"New Germany gives notice that Germany in no wise intends to give up the fundamental basis of its race policy, as some foreign papers profess to believe."

Rust said his decree was "carrying out an old national socialistic demand."

As early as 1933, the year of Hitler's advent to power, higher schools saw the separation of Aryans and non-Aryans. The decree made clear that race, not religion, will be the determining factor in the segregation. Children who have only one Jewish grandparent, or so-called "quarter Jews," will be allowed to remain in the regular public schools.

Coal Firms' Suits Attack Guffey Act

16 Companies Term Code Illegal, Ask Stay.

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 10.—Sixteen coal companies denounced the Guffey coal code act as unconstitutional in five different ways, declared they would refuse to obey it, and asked for an injunction forbidding its enforcement in a suit filed in Federal court here late today.

The plaintiffs said their average monthly sales totaled $654,750, on which the act would levy a tax of $92,200. They said this would practically bankrupt them before they could recover the taxes, which they claim are illegal, in the ordinary manner.

Former Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson, who ruled unconstitutional the NRA and other New Deal legislation before he left the bench to re-enter private practice, filed the action today as counsel for the sixteen companies. Kentucky Internal Revenue Collector Selden R. Glenn was made the defendant, both officially and personally.

Civil War Veteran Dies; Joined Congress in '84

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 10 (AP).—William A. Sipe, 91, retired Pittsburgh attorney and Civil War veteran, who served in Congress during the two terms of President Grover Cleveland, died in a hospital here today. The body will be sent to Pittsburgh for interment.

Truck Load of Food Destroyed by Women

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 10 (AP).—Schuykill County's meat buyers' strike overflowed into Northumberland County today in a burst of violence that destroyed a truck load of provisions. A score of women attacked a truck of the Shamokin Packing Co. and heaved its entire contents into Shamokin Creek. The driver stood by helplessly.

Then another squad of women, picketing butcher shops, stopped customers, tore open their packages and tossed meat purchases into the gutter. The proprietors called for police aid but the trouble subsided as quickly as it broke out. The butchers said the women came from Shenandoah, where a strike to demand lower meat prices started last week and spread to Frackville, Mahoney City and Girardville.

Little Rallies To Hold Pace In Golf Test

Double Champion Wins Over Chicago Rival, 6 and 4, in Title Play.

Peacock Victor as Other Stars Fall in Day of Upsets.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, Sept. 10.—Sixty-four golfers, finest simon-pure talent in America, are left in the battle for the National Amateur crown. W. Lawson Little, jr., upon whose brow the laurel rests, is still in the championship, all grim and defiant, confident no man will dislodge him.

A young upstart from Texas, Rufus King, tried his level best to dethrone King Little yesterday, but the 25-year-old Californian erased him from the picture. A 28-year-old undertaker, Bill Lain, a Chicago golfer of note, attempted today to embalm the hopes of the British and American amateur ruler, but Little abruptly lambasted him out of the tournament with a smashing 6-and-4 victory.

King Little knew too much for Lain—too much about golf shots and embalming; for when he was a kid in knee pants he used to chop huge divots out of fairways and bunkers, once the graves of old Chinese fanatics.

Rally Turns Tide.

The champion completed his rout of the Chicago undertaker with a 1-over-par performance for the 14 holes, not bad considering that Little was 2 down as he passed the fourth.

Fraught with upsets was this second round of the championship. The wave of unexpected reversals began early in the morning when Morton McCarthy, 200-pound Norfolk giant and Middle Atlantic champion, snapped the title aspirations of Zell Eaton, Oklahoma ace and 1934 Western champion, 1 up on the nineteenth hole. In a spectacular finish, the big Virginian knocked in a 25-footer for a birdie 3 on the home green to square the match, and went on to win with a par 4 on the first extra hole when Eaton three-putted.

Roger Peacock Wins.

Then followed the surprising elimination of lean, fuzzy-headed Johnny Fischer, of Cincinnati, the holder of the all-time National Amateur medal record, star of the 1934 Walker Cup matches and 1932 national intercollegiate champion. Fischer fell before Eddie Hogan, stolid Beaverton, Oreg., golfer, 2 and 1. Fischer, obviously in a slump, was down virtually all the way, powerless before the rock-steady stroking of his Pacific Coast rival.

Roger Peacock, of Washington, whose two 62s in a single year have shoved him into the spotlight, knocked out the English-bred threat, Bob Sweeny, semi-finalist in the Girl Student Is Shot As Bandits Loot Bank

Mars Hill, N. C., Sept. 10 (AP).—Miss Dorris Sanderlin, of New Bern, a freshman at Mars Hill College, was wounded today by four bandits who shot their way out of town after holding up the branch here of the Citizens Bank of Marshall.

The girl was wounded in the abdomen by a rifle bullet. At Aston Park Hospital, in Asheville, she was reported in a critical condition.

Apparently thrown into a panic when a telephone operator turned in a fire alarm upon learning the robbery was in progress, the bandits came out of the bank shooting with a machine gun and rifles.

Miss Sanderlin, who came to Mars Hill only yesterday, was in a drug store when the alarm was turned in. She ran out as the bandits left the bank and was shot.

Newsom Delays Tiger Drive For Flag by Winning, 6 to 0

By Shirley Povich.

The pennant-bound Detroit Tigers met up with Buck Newsom yesterday and encountered a slight delay. Nothing came of their efforts to solve Newsom's delivery, nothing except a 6-to-0 beating by the Washington right-hander, who was in extreme good health out there on the mound.

They got to first base against Newsom, all right, but only one Tiger could get to second. That's the kind of ball Newsom pitched. In the last seven innings, not a Tiger advanced past first base while Newsom was applying the finishing touches to a six-hit performance. All of those six hits were singles.

Newsom contributed nothing to the Tigers' efforts to clinch the pennant. While he was turning 'em back here, the Yankees up in New York were winning a game from Cleveland to cut the Tigers' lead to seven and a half games and thus maintain their fighting chance to get back into the pennant race.

Whenever the Tigers threatened Newsom even mildly, his mates rescued him with a double play. Four times the Tigers subsided from the effects of Washington twin killings, two started by Red Kress and one by Newsom himself.

While Newsom was restraining the Tigers, the Nats drove Schoolboy Rowe out of the box in five innings, with the early results of a 15-hit attack that three Detroit pitchers shared in. When Rowe yielded the duties to Vic Sorrell in the sixth, Washington was in possession of a 4-0 lead.

The game saw Cecil Travis make his debut in the Washington outfield, but it was a mild test for the converted third baseman, who received only one chance and handled that perfectly despite a glaring sun.

Washington started nudging Rowe in the second inning when four hits produced a 2-0 lead. Estallella greeted Rowe's fast-ball pitching with a line single to left, but was forced by Kress with the help of an astigmatic decision by Marberry.

Political Chaos Grips Louisiana As Huey Long's Empire Totters; Funeral of Senator Tomorrow

Candidates for Huey Long's Power

Hasty Conferences Called by Leaders

Troops Posted in City; Foe of Senator Cites End as 'Warning.'

By the United Press.

New Orleans, Sept. 10.—Senator Huey Long's political machine floundered without a leader tonight.

The Kingfish was dead. No man came forward to succeed him.

Gov. O. K. Allen, next in command, retreated, announced he was through with politics.

First signs of discord hit the Legislature. One of the 31 bills prepared by Long for the extra session was killed. It would have abolished a police juror in LaSalle Parish; a minor bill, but they never would have dared drop it if Long were alive.

The machine coasted along of its own momentum, but it was headed for an uphill climb with no power to surmount it.

Enemies of Long rallied.

District Attorney Fred Odom pushed an inquest of the slaying of Dr. Carl A. Weiss, Senator Long's assassin, by the Senator's bodyguards.

At an open court investigation of a previous alleged murder plot against Long in January, a witness named Odom as one of the plotters.

Inquest Set Off.

Odom had Weiss' inquest postponed today. He said he had new witnesses, "six or eight, and I will have more." He set the inquest for early next week, tentatively.

On the rear steps of a funeral parlor wherein the slain dictator lay, a dozen of his former bodyguards sat disconsolately, watching over him in death.

The Legislature remained in session, deeming this a greater tribute to Long's memory than adjournment.

Floor leaders carried on the work, but many doubted that the true import of the 30 bills would be known. It was Long's custom to insert "jokers" into his bills in the form of amendments during the last busy hours of a special session. These "jokers," slyly camouflaged, usually carried out his purposes of punishing an enemy, rewarding a friend. As they stand now, most of them effect minor changes in bond and tax laws. The Legislature will finish its work Wednesday.

Senator Long had not been dead an hour when Lee O. Lester, vice president of the Square Deal Association, warned legislators and other State officials to "heed the example of the man who just passed away."

The Square Dealers claim 80,000 members and are organized "to destroy the dictatorship."

Limit Condolences.

Expressions of mourning were unanimous in New Orleans, but in most cases, outstanding foes of Senator Long confined their statements to "sorrow for the wife and children."

"Share-the-Wealth" clubs pledged their loyalty to Gov. Allen and elevated him to "the symbol of the spirit of loyalty we have for our great State," the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith said.

The gentle, diffident Governor said, however: "I was a lieutenant of Huey's and am proud of it, but as to seeking further public glory, I have no desire for it."

Long's cohorts at first tried to arrange for Allen to resign, permitting Lieut. Gov. James A. Noe to succeed him and then appoint Allen to Long's vacant Senate seat. Allen demurred. His term expires next May. Long was grooming Noe for the governorship next.

Senator Long's closest political advisers were in deepest mourning. None was ready to consider the succession to his Louisiana Democratic Association, the organization by which he financed campaigns of his friends and dispensed their patronage.

The stronger of Long's lieutenants, paradoxically, held minor jobs, such as: Assistant Attorney General George Wallace, who drafted most of the dictatorship bills; Seymour Weiss, his steadying influence, president of the Port of New Orleans; Public Service Commis-

Assassinated Leader Will Rest in State in Rotunda.

Senator in Coma Prior to His Death

Wife and Lieutenants Remain at Bedside Until the End.

By the United Press.

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 10.—The lights flickered out over Huey P. Long's hospital bed today and with them went his life.

He died surrounded by the men he had raised to power in his empire of Louisiana. At the foot of his bed his wife—a girl he met when he was a flour salesman and she was a champion cake-baker—held her head in her hands and wept.

Every resource of medical science failed in the attempt to preserve the life that was attacked Sunday night when an assassin's bullet plowed through Long's body. Oxygen tanks were used to the end and the blood of five men—including Lieut. Gov. James Noe—was pumped into Long's arteries in a vain attempt to revive him.

Events moved swiftly in Baton Rouge tonight with Long's followers struggling to seize the empire he built for them, but the talk still was of Long and how he died.

That was decided officially tonight when a brief inquest was held. No witnesses were called and abruptly a door opened and this verdict was returned:

"That this was a homicidal death caused by a pistol shot in the abdomen."

Long's assassin, Dr. C. A. Weiss, riddled by the Senator's bodyguards, already has been buried. Resumption of the inquest for him was postponed indefinitely.

End Comes Quietly.

The end for the turbulent Long came quietly. He was lying in a room on the second floor of the Lady of the Lake Sanitarium. Only once in the hours just before dawn was he conscious enough to recognize anyone. That was the man who stood at his right hand in all his fights—Gov. O. K. Allen.

"Get back, Oscar, and give me some air," Long was reported to have muttered to him, while the oxygen tanks hissed gently, pouring life-giving gas into his lungs.

The rest was incoherent. Now, he would babble about his new book, "My First Days in the White House." Then he would talk of new plans for Louisiana and the Nation.

Nuns moved through the room, handing stethoscopes to Dr. Arthur Vidrine and Dr. E. L. Sanderson. Allen moved in and out of the room, trying to persuade Mrs. Long to sit down in a chair on the porch outside. In the gloom she could be seen shaking her head and moving back into the room.

Then the hospital room went

G. O. P. Mourns Sharpest Thorn To Plague Roosevelt New Deal

Capital Skeptical of Farley Claim Third Party Would Have Been Negligible; Doubts Long's Aids Can Hold Power.

By the Associated Press.

Out of the endeavor to measure political effects of the death of Senator Huey P. Long came the view from Republicans yesterday that the sharpest thorn to plague the Democratic Administration was gone.

It was expressed in the quiet of their offices by persons who refused to be quoted. They put the same thought again in different words and said they hated to see this "democratic dissolving influence" removed.

Democrats talked less about his death, other than to voice expressions of deep regret. Politics did not appear in their statements, but there was general agreement that the outstanding threat of a third party movement had disappeared from the path of the oncoming presidential campaign.

Farley Flies Claim.

Postmaster General Farley, just returned from a Hawaiian vacation, said he never had thought there would be a substantial third-party movement.

Farley added a prediction that President Roosevelt would be renominated and re-elected without difficulty, regardless of who might be the Republican candidate. The chairman of the Democratic National Committee said he expected every State to send delegations to the next convention instructed for renomination of the President.

"How about Louisiana?" he was asked.

"I'll stand on the original statement," he said.

Long had threatened to fight the renomination of Mr. Roosevelt and said he would lead a third party into the field if the President were the Democratic candidate and a conservative were named by the Republicans.

Laws' Repeal Demanded.

While the Capital was asking how Long's death would affect the national political picture, James M. Thomson, a New Orleans publisher, was demanding an immediate repeal of the laws that gave Long his dictatorial power.

The chief question in the Capital—and an unanswered one—was:

Can anyone take Huey Long's place, pick up the reins he laid down and drive ahead into the national scene as he appeared determined to do?

Most of those with some knowledge of Louisiana said he left no successor, no one strong enough to hold together the widely varying

Friend and Foe Join in Tribute To Huey Long

Homage Paid Louisiana's Leader From All Parts of Country.

By the Associated Press.

Widespread regret over the death of Senator Huey P. Long echoed through the Capital last night, with universal condemnation of his assassination.

Probably no man in years had assumed so prominent a role in national affairs as quickly as the self-assured "dictator" of Louisiana, who said he wanted "every man a king."

There was genuine liking for Long in the Senate and elsewhere—just as there was genuine dislike for many of his methods.

From all walks of life came expressions of sympathy for the widow, and regret that so striking and tempestuous a figure had been removed from the national scene.

His Shrewdness Extolled.

Even among those who had privately expressed fear that Long might become a "menace to the Nation" if his power increased, there was appreciation of his intelligence and political shrewdness, just as his ruthlessness and what many believed were his unsound theories were deplored.

Displaying his unique personality, Long could lash his colleagues with sarcasm on the Senate floor one minute, and heartily back-slap them the next. His wit kept them in smiles even as they angrily sought a way to rebuke him.

One of the highest appraisals of Long's ability came from a political antagonist. Norman Thomas, New York Socialist leader, called him "the ablest and most colorful forerunner of American fascism."

Of his untimely end, Secretary Morgenthau said, "It is seriously disturbing to learn of a resort to unlawful violence as a political weapon anywhere in America."

President Roosevelt, whom Long had supported for the 1932 nomina-

1,000 Students Act in Strike

Pupils of Harrison County March on School Board to Voice Demands.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 10.—More than 1,000 striking students from four Harrison County schools rallied at the offices of the Harrison County Board of Education at the courthouse here today to demand the return of replaced principals, teachers and janitors to their former positions. They failed to find Dr. J. W. Corder, president of the school board.

In addition to the Broadway Grade and Lumberport High School pupils who went on strike yesterday and paraded in the city and countryside, students of the Northview Grade and Junior High School and the colored Kelley Miller High School here struck this morning, demanding re-employment of Brady Simms as principal at Northview and the return of two former janitors at Kelley Miller.

The Broadway strikers demand the return of William Lewis as janitor, while the Lumberport students want Chester L. Martin back as principal.

Veteran school men on the county board declared that never before had the schools in central West Virginia experienced such a wholesale uprising as the one which started yesterday and gained headway today.

Pupils of Hartman Grade School and Mount Clare School threaten to strike tomorrow, when a mass meeting of all striking students will be held here.

Stratosphere Flight Camp Reopened in West

Rapid City, S. Dak., Sept. 10 (AP).—The United States Army-National Georgraphic Society stratosphere camp was reopened today. Launching preparations for another attempt to guide a balloon into the upper reaches of the earth's atmosphere, Capt. Frank E. Bertholet and 58 soldiers moved in from Fort Meade.

The ascent will be attempted whenever weather conditions are favorable in October. The bursting of a balloon abruptly halted a projected flight here last July 12.

Burial of Long Set Tomorrow At His Capital

black. Some say it was a signal that life had gone. But in ten seconds the room was flooded with yellow light again and Mrs. Long was seen at the foot of the bed, weeping. Allen stumbled into the hall of the hospital and wandered aimlessly down the corridor.

Tomorrow Long will lie in state under the brown spire of the magnificent capitol he built. Tonight his body is in a funeral parlor and the doors are locked against everybody except the members of the family.

Capitol His Monument.

Long will be buried at 4 p. m. Thursday on the State house grounds with a simple marble slab to mark his resting place. The State house itself, beautiful 33-story skyscraper built by Long, will be his monument.

Long chieftains, hurriedly called into conference, debated their political future. A seat in the United States Senate and the Governor's chair were involved.

Long's opponents for the most part remained silent although Lee O. Lester, vice president of the Square Dealers' Association, gave out a bristling statement challenging the people of Louisiana to heed the warning of Long's assassination and get back to a "democratic" form of government.

Long died after five blood transfusions, use of an oxygen tent, and injections of adrenalin had failed to stem the damage done when a bullet from the gun of Dr. Weiss, 30-year-old Baton Rouge throat specialist, tore its way into his side.

He was in a room from which the spire of the State House is plainly visible. His friends and relatives grouped about him, he died after a period of unconsciousness.

Seymour Weiss, the top-man in the Long organization, conferred at length with other leaders.

Weiss was fond of Long not so much for what Long could do for him—as was the case for most of Long's followers—but for what he could do for Long. He believed in Long and has helped him from the start of a spectacular career which brought Long in a meteoric flight from a country drummer to perhaps the most publicized national figure of the day.

Troops Everywhere.

Guards were everywhere in Baton Rouge tonight. Brown-clad members of the State militia stood sentinel duty at every entrance and patted the hip pockets of visitors in a search for firearms. Plain clothes men packed the marble floors, nervously tugging at cigarettes.

A brief inquest was held on Long's death. No witnesses were called and the verdict reached was "homicidal death as a result of pistol shots in the abdomen." The inquest on Weiss was postponed indefinitely.

Up in the towering State capitol, where the Legislature meets, Huey Long's will still was law. The senate met to finish passing a batch of bills—the last command he gave to the legislative body that moved to his orders like a drill squad.

Long's body was in a funeral parlor and its doors were tight shut against the outside world. Only members of his family were admitted, but tomorrow friends and foes alike can pass by his coffin.

Earl J. Christenberry, Long's secretary, issued this statement:

"Senator Long's body will lie in state in the rotunda of the capitol from 1 p. m. Wednesday until 4 p. m. Thursday, where it may be viewed by his friends and citizens of the State."

Temporarily, the man who holds the purse strings and seems to be in control is Weiss, New Orleans hotel man and treasurer of the Long organization. He was the one who was issuing invitations for the conferences and the one who was hanging on the telephone. The situation changed by the half-hour, but one tentative arrangement was to put Gov. O. K. Allen into Long's seat in the United States Senate and to elevate Lieut. Gov. James Noe to the governorship.

In the midst of this confusion the forces of law and order moved to tie up the last threads of Sunday night's tragedy when Dr. Weiss stepped from behind a pillar, leveled a pistol and drilled a bullet through Long's body.

Uncertainty Felt.

Meantime, fear and uncertainty swept Louisiana's cities and crept up the crossroads at the end of the bayous. The one man believed capable of holding his empire together was gone.

In the ranks of those who fought Long only one man had the courage—or the inclination—to attempt to overthrow the former dictator's organization in this, its darkest hour. He was Lester.

Long's allies were doing their talking — and their arguing — in hastily-called conferences. They were shouting at each other, it was said, through the smoke and steam of overcrowded rooms.

The end came to Long after every resource of medical science had been exhausted. The window of Long's room opened on the brown spire of the State Capitol. But he was neither seeing nor hearing in the final minutes. Unconsciousness came to him at 4:10 a. m., then ultimate darkness. It was preceded by another darkness, the flickering off of the lights in the hospital room at the Lady of the Lake Sanitarium. Then they came back on again, and this is what could be seen:

Two nuns moved serenely back and forth in the room, their white headdresses making a white halfcircle above their black robes. Long lay in bed and only the slow and irregular rise and fall of his chest as he breathed with difficulty told physicians he was clinging to life. An oxygen compartment covered him and the nuns watched anxiously through its transparent sides. Outside the door there were three empty oxygen tanks, and an unused one stood beside the bed. Out of it the life-giving gas hissed gently.

Doctors Stand By.

Closest to the bed stood Dr. Arthur Vidrine and Dr. E. L. Sanderson. They would bend over the bed and then straighten up for a whispered consultation.

Long's room was on the second floor of the Lady of the Lake Hospital. A porch runs outside of it. Gov. Allen and Mrs. Long tip-toed back and forth between the porch and the room. Sometimes he took her gently by the arm and led her to a porch chair, but quickly she was up again and pacing into the room.

Then the lights went black. In ten seconds yellow light flooded the room again. Mrs. Long had her head in her hands, weeping. Allen stumbled out into the hall.

Between You and Me

Post Mortem on Huey Long; NRA Still Handing Out Jobs; Remedy for Nearsightedness.

By Raymond Clapper

The restless, striding body of Huey Long is still now, and all are inclined to speak as generously as they can of the man who caused so much trouble in his short public career.

One of the best characterizations of Long comes from Col. James M. Thomson, publisher of the New Orleans Item and Morning Tribune. He knew Long well, both as friend and political foe, and saw the spectacular phenomenon rise and shoot across the landscape of his State.

"I came to realize," Col. Thomson said, "that he possessed almost unique capacity for sustained labor, with an incredibly rapid and acute mentality. The tragedy of his life and of his public career is to be found in his insatiable seeking for personal power; more power than any one man should possess; and his failure to use that power for proper public ends."

Nearly 100 years ago, Emerson, writing of Napoleon, came astonishingly close to describing Huey Long:

"Nature must have far the greatest share in every success, and so was his. Such a man was wanted, and such a man was born: a man of stone and iron, capable of sitting on horseback 16 or 17 hours, of going many days together without rest or food except by snatches, and with the speed and spring of a tiger in action; a man not embarrassed by any scruples; compact, instant, selfish, prudent, and of a perception which did not suffer itself to be balked or misled by any pretense of others, or any superstition, or any heat or haste of his own."

Superficially, Huey Long typified in many ways the American temperament. He had its rough, braggart humor, its directness. He was shrewd, earthy, impudent, daring, plausible, boisterous and effective. Personally, he was as American as an Iowa farmer. Politically, he was an alien. His genius was better suited to an ignorant, oppressed people than to an intelligent, self-governing Nation. Politically, he was like bad money, driving out the good, playing on the most ignorant and gullible, forcing other public men to trade in his cheapened political coin.

No man can be a leader and be wholly bad. Huey Long voiced some of the grievances and longings of the less fortunate section of the population. But this was an incidental by-product of his quest for power.

What might have happened to Huey Long had he lived? His appeal was to the hopeless and despairing. His light burned brightest under a black sky.

But suppose, as seems probable, that we are now leaving the depression behind us and are heading back into another period of reasonable prosperity and opportunity and widely diffused comfort. Already there were signs, in recent months, that Long was a shrinking figure in the national imagination. Would he have found himself, a few years hence, a man who led outlived his time, an aging comedian, merely a funny man in the Senate, plump and bald, his ideas stale and no longer appealing to large masses, another bivouacked hero? That has happened to other strong men, whose tide has ebbed leaving them flat on the beach. Huey Long would have been unhappy in such a role. It is hard to imagine him as an old man.

Politically, his death is a break for the Administration, though one that is easily overestimated. But such influence as Long would have had next year would have been used to the disadvantage of Mr. Roosevelt. Of all of the third party threats, his was the only one which carried any possibilities of affecting the result. This leaves Mr. Roosevelt with less annoyance on the left. He will not be compelled to devote so much attention to defending his rear with share-the-wealth gestures.

Republicans lose slightly by that, perhaps. But probably not much. The hopes some of them had that Huey Long would split the Roosevelt vote were more wishful than sound.

A cartoon appeared in the New York Herald Tribune last Friday. It was entitled "The Fates Are Funny That Way." A series of panels showed people being killed in automobile crashes, by poisoned food at picnics, by earthquakes, floods, and pestilence. In the bottom panel the common citizen turns from his newspaper to remark to his wife: "But nothing ever seems to happen to Huey Long."

There isn't any more NRA, but the news apparently hasn't got around down at the recovery offices yet. One person got a job there this week.

The organization candidate for Governor who carried the Administration's good will lost in the Kentucky Democratic primary. Lieut. Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler, who bucked the organization, won by a comfortable margin over Thomas S. Rhea, former State highway commission chairman, who had the backing of the politically powerful highway department.

Medical science believes it has almost found the secret for inexpensive production of cortin, a glandular substance used in treating myopia, a type of progressive nearsightedness. It would be a help if they could get this remedy going in time for the presidential campaign.

Long Machine Falters; Chaos In Louisiana

None Steps Forward to Claim Throne of Dead Dictator.

sioner James O'Conner, his utilities expert; State Representative L. M. Wimberly, his authority on tax matters.

These men, if they were heading their departments with authority and could work in unison, might be able to hold the machine together. Instead, they are subject to ranking State officials, some of whom were mere loyal puppets to Long.

Senator Long confounded his enemies in death.

There are seven outstanding anti-Long factions. When they had a mutual goal in attacking Long, they were able to put up more or less of a common front, although they frequently fought among themselves even then. In a free-for-all scramble for votes in the 1936 elections, all would suffer. Realignments were expected to follow quickly, changing the whole course of Louisiana politics.

The Tammany-like old regulars of New Orleans remained for the moment as Long split them. The faction led by Mijes Pratt, city finance commissioner, announced it would not rejoin Mayor T. S. Walmsley's followers. Pratt and 13 ward leaders voted to "surrender" the city to Long in July, while Walmsley and four ward leaders held out against it. Now they are enemies.

Strongest Group.

Edward Rightor and his Honest Election League, which prosecuted Long's candidates in two Senate investigations, were engaged in a row with Col. John P. Sullivan's group, which handles Louisiana's Federal patronage, before Long died. Rightor said his recommendation for a United States marshal in New Orleans was ignored by Sullivan.

The five Louisiana Representatives — Sanders, Sandlin, Dear, Montet and Wilson — who united against Long this year, were expected to stick with Sullivan for a time, enabling that union to put up the strongest front in the first analysis.

Walmsley, Sullivan and Francis Williams, head of the anti-Long-Jackson Democratic Clubs, issued almost identical statements of "sympathy for Senator Long's family."

State government was in deepest mourning. Many State offices and schools, even in Tangipahoa Parish, the hotbed of anti-Long sentiment, were closed. The Civil Courts Building, State board of health and State law library closed in New Orleans. The attorney general's office and conservation departments operated with skeleton staffs.

Motorists Crash Crust Driving in Salt Lake Bed

Salt Lake City, Utah (AP).—Belief the dry bed of Great Salt Lake could be safely crossed by automobile resulted in a family of four being stranded for 18 hours, exposed to the burning heat of the day and the chilling cold of the night.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Rockwood and their two infant daughters started on a trip to Antelope Island, but their car broke through the crusted surface. They carried their children to safety on a sand bar, and Rockwood then was forced to scramble 13 miles to call for help.

pull back her soldiers without a shot being fired unless offered a complete protectorate over Ethiopia.

Meantime, as all hopes of success of the committee of five faded, attention riveted on a conference between Sir Samuel Hoare, Capt. Anthony Eden and Premier Laval, of France. This gathering of Britain's and France's leading diplomats lasted most of the afternoon and was resumed at 7 p. m.

The meeting "disclosed the far-reaching extent of the Franco-British agreement," and the possibility of applying League sanctions in case of eventual Italian aggression was reported to have been discussed.

Hoare was the man of the hour as League members sat back helplessly and saw the Geneva collective security structure crumbling under their feet. He is the only statesman who has announced in advance his intention to address the Assembly Wednesday.

Hoare will restate Britain's belief that Italy needs field for expansion, but will insist the Covenant be respected and collective security efforts saved.

Wales Visits Offices.

The Prince of Wales visited League headquarters this morning to lend royal support to the British delegation.

Ethiopia notified the League today that Italy is concentrating troops on the Eritrean frontier "presumably with a view to offensive action against Ethiopian territory shortly."

The note delivered to the League secretariat by Tekla Hawariat, on instructions of Emperor Haile Selassie, said:

"I am instructed by my government to convey to you the following: Telegrams received from the northern provinces report important movements of Italian troops occurring at various points on the Eritrean frontier presumably with a view to offensive action against Ethiopian territory shortly."

Simultaneously Ethiopia, replying to an appeal by the committee of five to refrain from hostilities during negotiations, pledged herself not to resort to force while the committee is active.

Baron Aloisi replied to the appeal by saying that Italy did not recognize the commitee, since it had not voted on the resolution which gave it birth. Italy, he made clear, retains complete liberty of action against Ethiopia.

tion and then turned upon bitterly soon afterward, made no comment yesterday, but had deplored the shooting and expressed sympathy in a statement Monday.

From the man Long had bitterly assailed as the "chinch bug of Chicago," Secretary Ickes, came the expression:

"I think it is highly regretable from every point of view. I had hoped we had passed the stage in this country long ago when political issues were decided by assassination."

At Albany, Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, declared "our motto must always be 'ballots, not bullets,'" as he termed the assassination "the most regrettable thing in modern history."

Bone Deplores Murder.

Senator Bone (Democrat), Wash., also scored the use of "instruments of murder" when the ballot is available to decide political issues.

A congressional investigation of the crime was suggested by Representative Fenerty (Republican), Pennsylvania, at Atlantic City. The House committee which had planned an inquiry into Long's overlordship of Louisiana, Fenerty thought, might also probe the instigation of the shooting.

Representative Lewis (Democrat), Colorado, a committee member, expressed doubt that such a step would be taken. It was emphasized, though, that the decision would rest with the committee leadership.

Samuel T. Ansell, plaintiff in a $500,000 libel action against Long growing out of a Senate investigation of the election of Senator Overman (Democrat), Louisiana, announced that his suit was "terminated."

Horror Is Expressed.

Expressions of horror over the assassination and tributes to Long emanated in growing numbers from all parts of the country.

A touch which doubtless would have drawn one of Long's impish grins could he have heard it came from Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, who described the stricken Senator's fight for life by saying "Huey even filibustered against death."

Randolph said an ordinary man would have died in three hours of such a wound.

"I am very, very sorry," was the comment of Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, who often had engaged in acrimonious exchanges with Long on the Senate floor and one of the Senators Long had threatened to campaign against in 1936.

Johnson Pays Tribute.

Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator who once called Long a "political termite" and an "economic shyster" in a radio duel, sent a telegram to Mrs. Long saying, "immensely grieved at the loss of your fighting husband, who in spite of differences of opinion I counted as my friend."

Other comment included:

Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, of New Orleans, leader of the Long opposition: "I'm sorry the Senator has died."

Postmaster General Farley, repeatedly denounced by Long, who had sought unsuccessfily a Senate investigation of his activities: "Every American mst regret the tragedy of Senator Long's death.

Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas:

"The assassination • • • was deplorable and regrettable."

Gov. Philip LaFollette of Wisconsin: "A man of excetpional ability."

Frank E. Gannett, newspaper publisher: "He was one of the ablest men in the Senate and a dynamic force in America. This fact made him a menacing figure."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor: "The assassination • • • was a dastardly act • • • labor shares • • • the common sorrow • • •

Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, dean of the House: "I never knew a more courageous, determined or harder working man."

Gov. Lehman, of New York: "I am very sorry indeed to hear of Senator Long's death."

elements that went into the making of his State political machine which was the foundation of his national prominence.

Gesture for Allen.

They read into the statement by the Rev. Gerold L. K. Smith, of Baton Rouge, national organizer of the "share our wealth" clubs, that the clubs would be loyal to Gov. O. K. Allen, the first sign of an effort to bestow the Long scepter upon the Louisiana executive.

Whether the former Baptist Sunday School teacher would step out of the dictator's shadow, which has completely hidden him in the past, and move firmly ahead was a question that few would attempt to answer. All agreed that it would take a bold and strong man to wear Long's crown.

In some capital quarters, it was felt that Long's influence nationally recently had been on the wane. His mail, which reached a peak during his radio quarrel with Gen. Hugh Johnson, had dropped off.

New Deal His Obsession.

Administration leaders also had lost no opportunity to tell the public that Long's deficiency appropriation bill filibuster had been responsible for killing legislation carrying appropriations to aid crippled children and the aged.

But Long himself refused to admit he was slipping. Only a few weeks ago, he invited President Roosevelt to debate with his in Louisiana. In his characteristic manner, Long said his own presence on the platform would guarantee a crowd.

Long's hatred of the New Deal had become almost an obsession in the last two years. He called it the "St. Vitus dance" regime. A few months ago, he told a reporter his support of Roosevelt for nomination at the Chicago convention "makes me madder than anything I ever did."

Within the Administration circle were many who had received political threats from Louisiana's ruler. Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, Senators Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi; Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, and McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, on one occasion or another had been told by Long he would fight their re-election in their own States.

Many believed the Louisianan's passing would leave little reason for further Administration efforts to limit Senate debate. Robinson had planned to seek a bar to one-man filibusters after Long talked a strategic Administration bill to an adjournment death.

Thomson, in his statement issued here, said:

"Long's death, viewed from its public effect, should give Louisiana a political breathing spell. The laws which he enacted to buttress and extend his dictatorship must be repealed."

Something of the view that was held in many Republican quarters was expressed by Senator Schall (Republican), Minnesota. He said:

"I feel he did more than probably any other man in the United States in bringing to the attention of the people what this Administration is doing to them. He seemed to be able to get a hearing when nobody else could."

Who Will Fill Long's Vacant Chair in Senate?

Velocipede Runaway Joins Adventure Club

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clifton Forge, Va., Sept. 10.—Robert Kern, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Kern, of this city, joined the young adventurers' club this week when he got out his velocipede and pedaled 4 miles westward on the Midland trail before his journey was brought to a halt by police. He was returned immediately to his alarmed parents.

The charter member of the young adventurers' club is Junior Riddle, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Riddle, who two years ago made an expedition similar to that of young Kern. The Riddle boy, also 9 at the time, covered 11 miles in the direction of Roanoke before he was stopped by a motorist and returned to his home.

That comedy number being used rather generously on the air these days—"The Pig Got Up and Slowly Walked Away"—was resurrected from the song files of many years ago. Credit for popularizing it recently apparently goes to Frank Crumit, who has the rare knack of making himself exceedingly popular by singing things not overworked by every other artist on the air. He'll sing this one tonight as he presents Town Hall, WRC, at 8.

David Ross begins another season of "Poet's Gold" for C. B. S. tonight. The program begins at 9:45 elsewhere but will be caught on the wing, as it were, by WJSV following a transcription of four minutes or so length. Dave Ross has been giving readings on the air for several years and has been so successful that a book publisher compiled his verse for a popular market. The problems of the program director of the radio station of today are complicated and numerous. It does seem awkward to pick up a program of this type after it has got under way, however. Background for Ross' readings will be provided by Victor Bay's Orchestra.

It was not more than a week ago, if I remember correctly, that I sponsored a statement to the effect that Fred Astaire was through with radio following his brief appearance in the "Hit Parade." Now I learn that the "Hit Parade" will shift its operations from New York to the West Coast for the sole purpose of permitting Astaire (the same Astaire) to continue his singing and dancing on the air. The next set of four radio appearances by the popular dancing star will begin September 21. And then, on November 16, he will appear again for four consecutive weeks on the same show. The show shifts to the Coast because Astaire is making another picture.

Some time has passed since I sat in the audience at the Rialto (last Friday night) and took in with considerable interest the wind-up of the "Judging the Stars" competition. You will remember that Henry Nestor won, El Gary was second, Janet Coon, third, and Lansing Hatfield, fourth. The intriguing sideslant on the finals was the off-the-record discussions that followed which brought out conclusively that the audience selected by their applause the artists who also would have been selected by several persons interested in radio and competent to have served as professional judges. Nestor won by a reading of 241.5 over Gary, whose reading was 240.4, which gives eloquently the closeness of the contest.

Roosevelt's Aid Sought to Settle Works Dispute

Ickes Will Ask President Today for Showdown in Hopkins Fight.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt will be asked today to act as referee in the internal battle threatening to wreck the major part of the $4,000,000,000 works relief program.

Secretary Ickes, at present apparently on the losing end of the fight, will go to Hyde Park today to confer with the President. He will be accompanied by Undersecretary of the Interior West, who already has made one trip to see the President about the situation. Later in the week Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator and relief boss, will confer with the President. It will also be his second trip on the same mission.

Meanwhile, the meeting of the allotment board, scheduled for yesterday, was not held and no date for a meeting was set. The date will depend on the outcome of the Hyde Park conferences. The Ickes meeting with the President will coincide with the "deadline" set for receipt of applications for works money.

Officials Protest Rejections.

A barrage of protests from public officials all over the country against wholesale rejection of PWA projects is being centered on Hyde Park. The projects, about 2,000 in number, and totaling $352,000,000, were rejected by Hopkins after they had been approved by Ickes. Although PWA officials insist they are not inspiring protests, they have been careful to inform local officials that their building plans have been approved by PWA and then rejected by WPA.

The long-standing feud between Ickes and Hopkins is believed finally to have reached the point where the President must intervene and lay down the law. Ickes insists that while Hopkins, under the regulations, must pass on PWA projects with reference to cost per man and availability of labor, he has no right to reject them and they can go to the allotment board for approval in spite of any action by Hopkins. Thus far, however, no project not receiving Hopkins' approval has reached the allotment board.

Boondoggling Approval.

Projects turned down by Hopkins include hundreds of public buildings, schoolhouses and major municipal and State projects for which Ickes had planned to allot 45 per cent of the cost, the local governmental unit to pay the rest. Meanwhile, "boondoggling" projects and other "made" work, in which material costs amount to little or nothing, are being approved by the hundreds.

Ickes said he was going to Hyde Park at the request of the President.

"The President called me last night and asked me to come up. I thought I would go," he said.

Later Hopkins said he expected to go to Hyde Park "soon," but added that "I won't beat Ickes there."

Hopkins repeated the assertion that he had made many times before, that he and Ickes had no quarrel.

"I have altogether too damned much work to do," he said. "I have a job to do and I am going to do it."

Ickes Dissents.

Ickes indicated that he believed Hopkins was doing too much work.

"There is nothing," he said, "in the Executive order of the President setting up the tripartite administration of the program which gives anybody the right to veto anybody's projects. Any member of the allotment committee can bring up any project at any time."

The PWA ceased to receive applications Monday, because the amount asked far exceeds the amount of money likely to be available to PWA. However, Hopkins is turning down the projects almost as fast as they clear PWA and are sent to him.

Ickes disputed the Hopkins statement that cost per man per year was too high on PWA projects. He said he understood the average was to be $1,143 per man and that the average for the 2,000 applications rejected by Hopkins was only $958. This covers only the Government's share of the cost.

"I never was very good at figures myself, but I don't think I am the only one in the Government with that failing," Ickes said.

Ickes said he believed all the rejected projects were necessary in the plan to put people to work.

The PWA announced that applications for cunds contemplated a "useful and permanent" program to cost $1,500,000,000. Of this sum, the applicants are asking that the Government make grants of $1,219,000,000. The announcement stressed the usefulness of the proposed work and the benefit to industries which will be called on to supply materials and machinery.

Transient Relief Is Cut.

Meanwhile, the FERA moved to reduce transient relief activies. No more transients will be accepted at any of the centers, including the one in Washington, after September 20. A major part of the transient program, it was announced, will be discontinued during November.

The announcement said that plans are being made to provide jobs for all employable transients under the works program. Those who are not employable will be returned to their homes. Transient camps in which employables are now on work-relief projects will be set up as work projects under the new plan. This will mean, as has been the case in numerous other instances, merely a change of name. Thousands of those listed as going to work under the new program really are continuing in the same jobs they have been doing under FERA.

Transient bureaus in cities, however, will be completely abandoned. There were 255,711 individuals, receiving transient relief throughout the country on August 15. Of these, 122,018 were transient individuals, 123,248 were members of 34,484 transient families, and 10,445 were homeless individuals being cared for in the communities where they usually live.

The Works Administration announced that President Roosevelt had aproved an allotment of $1,342,010 for elimination of grade crossings in nine counties in Alabama. This is the first activity under the grade - limination program, for which $200,000,000 has been earmarked.

Liquor Revenue Is 15% of All Internal Taxes

Government Collected $411,000,000 in Past Fiscal Year.

New York, Sept. 10.—Federal receipts from liquor taxes for the fiscal year 1935 exceeded those for any year in the pre-prohibition period except 1918 and 1919, when very high rates were imposed, according to a study just completed by the National Industrial Conference Board.

For the period 1910-17 annual collections ranged between $209,000,000 and $284,000,000. In the fiscal year ended June 30, 1935, the Federal Government collected $411,000,000 from liquor taxes of all kinds.

These taxes accounted for 25 per cent of miscellaneous internal revenue taxes in that year and for about 15 per cent of all internal revenue taxes.

Of the total Federal receipts from liquor taxes in the year 1934-35 malt liquors produced somewhat more than half, according to the conference board's study; distilled spirits more than two-fifths, with a small remainder divided among wines, cordials, floor taxes and miscellaneous taxes.

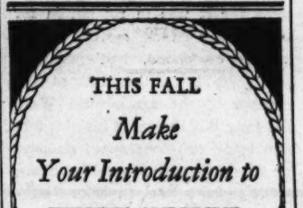

Collections from Federal liquor taxes, the study of the conference board points out, are considerably smaller than was estimated prior to repeal. It was generally assumed, for example, that the production of beer would equal the 1911-17 average of approximately 60,000,000 barrels. At $5 per barrel this rate of production would represent an annual tax revenue of $300,000,000. Actual production in the fiscal year 1934, however, was only approximately two-thirds of the 1911-17 average. This is due in part to the relatively low level of individual incomes and to continuation of bootleg production and distribution.

Meeting Postponed By Bar Association

The District Bar Association, due to meet last night at the Mayflower Hotel, will not hold its fall meeting until October 8. Many members are still out of the city.

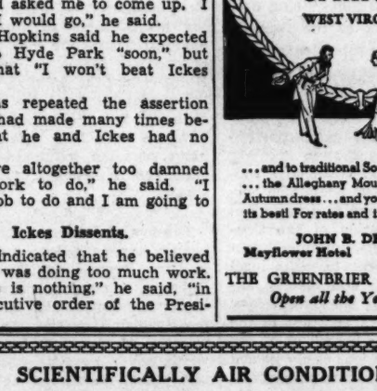

One of the first issues to be taken up by the association will be the question of whether a conciliator in divorce cases should be recommended to the District Supreme Court because of the increase in suits filed under the new law.

Hot Potatoes.

Lack of funds will not deter the AAA from dictating to virtually every American farmer the quantity of potatoes he may sell. An appropriation to carry out the potato control act failed with the third deficiency bill. But the AAA has announced that potato quotas will be ready before November 1.

Obviously the AAA has reached that decision reluctantly, for it does not favor the potato-control nostrum. The administrative difficulties of the act are so great that it will throw a tremendous new burden upon Secretary Wallace and his colleagues. Moreover, some officials fear that the scheme of reducing the potato crop, with the object of virtually doubling prices, will bring the entire AAA program into disrepute. Yet the adjustment administration is not in a position where it can repudiate this extreme application of its own theories.

The way in which the reduction of cotton acreage led to the planting of peanuts, and how consequent curtailment of peanuts brought about an overproduction of potatoes, is now an old story. It is well to remember that Congress imposed the rigorous cotton and potato control acts upon the AAA. Yet they are merely stepchildren of the AAA.

There is good reason for officials to fear that these stepchildren may get them into trouble. In the first place, control of potatoes may lead to restriction of all other vegetables. Imagine the perturbation of the AAA if it also should be required to fix string bean, lettuce, squash, tomato and spinach quotas for every farmer in the United States. After December 1 it will be a crime to sell or buy potatoes except in specially designed and stamped containers. Prospective "potato bootleggers" already threaten to give the Government the same trouble as did the venders of illicit liquor. Extension of quotas to similar crops would give the AAA an utterly impossible task of policing.

The AAA already has incurred a great deal of resentment because of skyrocketing food prices. An increase of 100 per cent in potato prices would be a hardship upon thousands of meager-income families that rely heavily upon this item in their diet. And a revolt against the potato-control scheme might be a signal for widespread repudiation of the AAA's experiments.

Farmers, too, will strongly resent this interference with a secondary crop. Restriction of wheat, cotton, corn, etc., may be tolerated, but when a Government undertakes to tell a farmer raising a half-acre of potatoes what part of his crop he may sell, paternalism has reached a point at which resistance becomes instinctive. Why look further for explanation of the AAA's desire to drop this hot potato?

Tip For Alumni.

One of the joys of sitting at a newspaper desk lies in watching the gags the press agents invent. For example, there was that one about choosing a Miss All America from the bona fide nudist camps of the country, a California-inspired creation which got into all the early Wall Street editions. Then there was the handout from Reed College which, saying nothing about nudists, never got into the papers at all. It's the latter that interests us.

It seems that Reed College, dedicated to the advancement of the youth of the Nation, is looking for a CCC boy to educate gratis. Inasmuch as some 60 per cent of the boys engaged in treedoggling are said not to have progressed beyond the eighth grade, this experiment in higher education is of limited applicability. While the experiment gives Reed College and its president, Dr. Dexter Keezer, a chance to keep their names before the public, or at least the editors, it also is a notion not, as they say, without merit.

The Reed idea, limited to the Zig Zag CCC Camp in Oregon, might well be taken up by other colleges if Mr. Robert Fechner does not object too strenuously. Of course, these boys might learn to read at random, which at one time seemed to be against his principles. But then they probably would not want to go back into the woods to spread their new knowledge after four years of pursuing the intellect.

The idea, however, will probably go over big with the organized alumni. There ought to be some pretty rugged individuals hidden away in the backwoods whose brawn would come in handy a year from the impending football season. "From CCC to College" (expenses paid) may yet become a Horatio Alger yarn for the sentimentalists of the sports pages. Seriously, we hope it does.

Huey P. Long.

It is ironical that the only factor which insures real endurance for the memory of Huey P. Long is the tragic way in which his life was ended.

Who remembers today the name of Henry Clay Warmoth, who 65 years ago ran Louisiana much as Long had run it in recent years? Who remembers Powell Clayton, Robert K. Scott, Harrison Reed, or any of the other carpet-bag politicians who, with varying degrees of unscrupulous ability, built their corrupt machines on the war-prostrated Southern States and for a few shameful years capitalized on the misery and helplessness of their subject peoples?

More admirable than this type, yet Huey P. Long must be regarded as their lineal successor. His abilities were unquestionably greater than those of most of the carpet-baggers. He was as colorful as Warmoth, as resourceful as Clayton, as forceful as Scott. And to these characteristics he added a streak of deep sincerity, a sympathy by no means hypocritical with the sufferings of the dispossessed, which brought a popular following his other qualities could never have commanded. It is entirely in keeping if, as reported, his last thoughts turned to the welfare of the students of the University of Louisiana. As one whose education was fragmentary, and gathered over great difficulties, he appreciated to the full the value of the tool of learning.

As the economic prostration which followed the Civil War in the South assisted the old carpet-baggers to hold their power, so the depression permitted Huey Long to advance from local to national stature. The distress and chaos of the last few years had been a springboard for the political aspirant with dynamic personality, unbounded self-assurance, and complete indifference to the gulf between promise and achievement. Trading first on the ignorance of his native State, and later applying the same formula on a wider scale, this born politician marched swiftly from triumph to triumph.

In the career of Huey Long is epitomized the essential weakness of democracy—the pathetic willingness of the electorate to trust a glib tongue and a dynamic personality. Quite justifiably he was called a forerunner of American Fascism, even before he had welded his dictatorship on his own State. For leaders like Senator Long, in whom there was not a little of both Hitler and Mussolini, have no recourse other than dictatorship when they gain power. Dictatorship is the only way in which the disillusionment of post-hypnosis can be kept within bounds. Dictatorship is the pitiable mess of pottage for which the masses unwittingly sell their birthright.

The United States is a most difficult nation in which to establish a successful personal government. It is comparatively easy to subordinate the people of a single State. But as long as this country justifies its name by remaining a federation of semi-sovereign commonwealths it will be all but impossible to achieve what Senator Long undoubtedly was seeking—an extension of his political machine from the local to the national field. The clowning tactics which were successful in the bayous did not sit so well elsewhere. Probably Huey Long had already passed the peak of his influence and was beginning the downhill coast when the assassin's bullet struck him.

It is interesting to realize that what happens now in Louisiana will be watched closely in distant lands. Hitler will spare a thought from his pogroms, and Mussolini from preparing the Ethiopian war, to see what develops in Louisiana after this local dictator is laid to rest. His death leaves a powerful organization not merely rudderless, but split into factions. So it would be, in similar case, in either Italy or Germany today. But from the feudal condition now revealed in Louisiana there should, after a period of chaos, be a rebirth of democracy. For the virus of dictatorship has not been in effect there long enough to sap the fiber of a people traditionally habituated to the principles of self-government.

That Huey Long was a man not merely of great energy, but also of outstanding ability, will be gainsaid by none who knew him. The pity is that the channel he chose to follow was one which inevitably dissipated the social contribution he might have made. That is why the glamour of the Kingfish, for all his relative youth, was already becoming tarnished. That is why his story will be remembered in our national annals largely for its dreadful ending; for the way in which the ground was crumbled beneath feet which themselves had trampled so ruthlessly in their rapid climb to the wind-swept pinnacles of human eminence.

The Blue And The Gray.

The Battle of Grand Rapids is likely to take its place along with the more famous ones of 1861-65. And, like the latter, this threatens to be another civil war. The troops, all members of the G. A. R., have drawn up their forces in the Michigan city and are prepared to fight to the finish. Encamped there in annual convention, these ancient warriors must decide whether or not they will meet jointly at Gettysburg in 1938 with their old enemies, the Men in Gray. Some are for this mass plan of burying the hatchet. Others are strongly "agin" it and mince no words in saying so.

In all justice to James Willett, former commander in chief of the G. A. R., it must be said that his opposition to the plan is not rooted solely in dislike of the Stars and Bars. But his proud old soul has never forgotten that when a similar suggestion was made some years ago, "Johnny Reb" refused to co-operate in no uncertain terms. Once up, Yankee blood subsides slowly, and Past Commander Willett has announced from headquarters that he will "fight with all my strength" against the combination reunion. And that, in spite of his 91 years, seems no puny threat.

It was said in 1898, and again when the World War came along, that there is no more North and South. But anyone who knows anything about the spirit of these tottering old fighters, whose ranks are now so pitifully thin, knows that the Battle of Bull Run will be fought as long as there is a survivor left. None the less it would be an appealing outcome if this Gettysburg reunion could be scheduled in the tactful spirit of the historian who described the Battle of Shiloh as a "Confederate failure but not a Union victory."

Merrily We Roll Along.

Administrative bungling has reached a new high with the open row between Secretary Ickes, head of the PWA, and Administrator Hopkins of the WPA. For months it has been apparent that the $4,000,000,000 work relief scheme was foundering for want of intelligent direction. Now the complete breakdown of what was once conceived as a vast program of useful public works is becoming all too clear.

The controversy between two of the responsible administrators of the work-relief organization is of such a fundamental character as to impugn the entire undertaking. Mr. Ickes has made a sincere and energetic effort to bring within this program projects that will be socially or economically valuable. Mr. Hopkins, however, seems to be interested only in putting 3,500,000 men on Government pay rolls, whether or not the work assigned them is of any use. Consequently, he has thrown out the most constructive proposals from the Ickes organization. If this policy is upheld by the President over the PWA administrator's protest, that organization will be forced into a minor role and virtually all of the $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund will be frittered away on "made work."

This basic disagreement on policy is, of course, only one angle of the imbroglio within the ranks of the work-relief organization. Mayor LaGuardia has taken the lead in vetoing projects approved by Mr. Hopkins for New York City because they involve too much boondoggling. In brief we have Mr. Hopkins throwing out numerous projects because they are too pretentious and local authorities rejecting his schemes because they are too unpractical. Thus the picture of chaos is complete.

Few observers who have followed the course of this misguided undertaking from its beginning can be surprised at this outcome. There was only one brief period, after the President had delivered his work-relief message to Congress last January 4, when it appeared that a constructive plan might be forthcoming. Disillusionment followed quickly as soon as the Administration's bill reached the House. No plan whatever was presented for the expenditure of the $4,000,000,000. What was then suspected—that the Administration had no plan in mind—is now all too painfully apparent.

Without asking how the money would be utilized the House passed the measure on January 24. The more responsible Senate sought in vain for a rational formula for spending so vast a sum. Then it tried, with no more success, to devise one of its own. Lacking concrete data, the best the Senate could do was to earmark the fund for distribution within general categories. Congress finally passed the bill on April 5 without any specific knowledge of how the appropriation would be spent.

Although this was a White House measure, it now appears that the President signed it in almost equal ignorance of future procedure. The very fact that his two chief aids in scattering this largesse are now at loggerheads over the fundamental policy to be pursued—five months after the act was signed—indicates the amorphous state of the original "plan." In these circumstances nothing but botchery could be expected.

From its inception the work-relief "program" has been nothing but wishful dreaming. Congress finally came to realize that fact, but tried to wash its hands of the whole mess by giving the President what he wanted. No doubt Secretary Ickes realized it, too, but he has valiantly attempted to head off public disillusionment as long as possible.

Only Harry Hopkins rolls merrily along the boondoggling path, seemingly quite hopeful of spending $4,000,000,000 with virtually no practical results. If the President fails to check his course, the WPA will soon be clearly defined as one of the greatest governmental fiascoes in American history.

A feature writer met in the mountains of Tennessee recently a man who had never heard of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Not only that, but he hadn't even seen Mrs. Roosevelt.

A Tactful Chap, The Maharaja.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The new fashion foible, trousered skirts, made a decided hit with the Maharaja of Patiala, we are told, when that Indian potentate was shopping around Paris for home-coming gifts for his 14 wives. He purchased 14 sapphire velvet affairs with ankle-length Turkish trousers under knee-length tunics.

It might be noted that the Maharaja was careful to have each of his gifts exactly alike. There is to be no strife-breeding discrimination in his harem. And there is to be no one wife singled out to wear the trousers in his home.

After all, no one can live with 14 wives without learning something.

Are Ethiopians Negroes?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The account of the Solomonic (or shall I say Mosaic) wisdom displayed by the Emperor of Ethiopia, in the story in The Post Magazine, September 8, when he ordered that the complainants whose brother had been killed by the fall of another person from a tree, be carried high up in the same tree and thrown down on the accused, was published in a book by one Skinner, an American consul, some 30-odd years ago, when the present Emperor was a mere child.

I have read some four or five books about Ethiopia, at least three of which were written by Americans—the others by Englishmen. In every one of these books of American authorship this story is reported, but this is the first time I have ever seen it attributed to the present Emperor. The books by English authors are all silent on this and other similar ridiculous stories.

Another story reported in all the books on Ethiopia by American authors is that of the black man from the West Indies who went to Ethiopia and had an interview with the late Emperor Menelik. The writers state this Negro set out in detail to Menelik the hardships and persecutions of the "downtrodden" Negro in the different countries, and suggested that the Negro republics and Ethiopia combine their influences to right their condition. These writers set out very gleefully that the Emperor listened carefully to his interviewer, and after he had finished answered somewhat after this fashion: "Your statements sound pretty good, but Ethiopians are Negroes."

These writers used this story without one word of comment, although Menelik, uncle of the present Emperor who they say is not negroid, had as distinctive Negro features as any unmixed Negro anywhere in the United States, with thick lips, flat low-bridged nose nappy hair, and from his pictures apparently dark brown skin. In strange contrast, the United States Census Bureau, in the last census, required enumerators to classify as Negroes all persons with any known Negro ancestry whatsoever, thus placing in the ranks of Negroes thousands of blonds without any visible marks of the Negro race.

As to whether Ethiopians are Negroid may be of little import to American Negroes; but if they are, why deny it, and if not, whence come the Negroid characteristics, just like millions of Negroid (and, consequently, Negroes) persons in the United States.

Congress And Meat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I agree heartily with W. H. Haun with reference to the inconsiderate (I would like to add irresponsible) AAA. But if an Administration-controlled majority in Congress had not handed over such powers to the AAA, with the hope of receiving from the Administration choice plums, we would not now be suffering from high meat prices, an undersupply of meat, and undernourished folks, as a result of the other two.

I have heard the present Congress called the "Congress of Mediocre Minds" and the "Yellow Congress," and both fit it.

The Machinery Of Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Pacifism is more than a play on words; it, like Communism, is more than an emotional blackjack to hurl at one's belief which happens to be contrary to or different from your pet or traditional practice. Pacifism denotes a conscious, orderly, perhaps scientific, method of settling disputes that arise between individuals, groups within a nation and nations themselves. It is the substitute of judicial or orderly procedure in place of military force.

This ideal when once put into practice will save for production and consumption of necessities and comforts those huge appropriations now converted into war materials, warships and bombers. We insist on judicial settlement disputes among citizens of the same state. Why not extend the procedure to include disputes among the nations of the world?

Politically today, treaties providing for arbitration or judicial settlement must be upheld either directly by the signatories themselves or through the agency of some such body as the World Court; else force, economic or military, will most likely be used.

I believe that the present neutrality laws of the United States are wise under the circumstances. History shows that war settles no disputes satisfactorily or permanently. Why, then, permit private interests to enter upon undertakings with Italy or Ethiopia that would most probably aggravate the present tension in Europe and Africa and lead very rapidly to dangers of involving the United States in the conflict?

It is not ideal to have to apply economic sanctions, but their application in time is preferable to immediate entry into war. It is the lesser of two evils, for, contrary to popular opinion, no neutrality laws status would lead to the largest shipments of war materials to the nation having the best credit. That situation would undoubtedly end eventually as did the one preceding our entry into the World War.

Economic sanctions, as the lesser of two evils, can be possibly excused on two grounds: their application would be effective and, since all inhabitants of a state are in modern warfare belligerents, their application will strike at the heart not only of soldiers but of civilian war workers and make them realize the sooner the futility of fighting and its suffering and force the issue of a peaceful settlement. The only possible exception to economic sanctions is certification of food, clothing and shelter to infants, mothers with babies and the aged.

The United States neutrality laws are a warning to European states to hold peace pacts and their obligations under the League of Nations as more than scraps of paper. Our own peace efforts have been largely negatived because we failed years ago to join an international organization in which our vast resources could have gone a long way in promoting peace among modern states and would have been for the material and spiritual benefit of all concerned.

Protesting Income Taxes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When William Jennings Bryan and his associates first proposed the income tax it was in retaliation for the protective tariff system, which, it was contended, had produced great wealth in the East at the expense of the agricultural West. Not only did the tariff restrict foreign trade and consequent demand for America's agricultural products, but it added artificial cost to nearly everything purchased by the farmer. As history repeats itself this same argument is today being used by the defenders of the Agriculture Department's subsidies to farmers and the corresponding processing tax.

Fortunately, the income tax proposition was found to be unconstitutional. When an income tax was found to be unconstitutional a subterfuge was enacted, one which now threatens to be used as a precedent for another violation of the Constitution. The sixteenth amendment was passed in order to make legal a measure which was clearly unconstitutional. As the income tax was to fall upon 2 per cent of the population for the benefit of 98 per cent, the measure was easily passed by those who had more respect for the majority rule than for consideration of equity and justice. The eighteenth amendment to the Constitution was adopted in exactly the same way, but was repealed when it could no longer be endured.

It is likewise high time that the iniquitous sixteenth amendment be repealed and that the income tax, which is essentially legalized robbery which has already taken nearly $60,000,000,000 from business men and devoted it to the extravagant use of politicians, which has ruined thousands of legitimate business men and corporations, which has instituted inquisitorial methods combined with unjust fines and exactions hitherto deemed impossible with the free people, should be abolished.

Bellicose Bench.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe all decent Americans will deplore the violent language used by Magistrate Brodsky when discharging the defendants in the Bremen case. All the lawyers I have talked with agreed that if the magistrate had but a shred of decency he would have frankly confessed prejudice, which robbed him of jurisdiction, and declined to sit on the case.

The words of the magistrate are so scandalous as to forbid repeating even to explain criticism. The State Department should issue a prompt, generous and wholesome disavowal of the language used by Brodsky, with the implication that the New York authorities should consider his conduct as a cause for impeachment. A magistrate must practice self-denial before he engages in "denial of justice."

The Post Impressionist

Aspenwall Re Women.

Post Office, Wednesday.

HERE is a letter that we commend, not to the mercy, but to the candid consideration, of all column-contributors.

Boston, Mass.,
Sept. 8, 1935.

Post-Impressionist,
Washington Post,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Having for 40 years made a study of the women of 20 countries, I was much interested by extracts from your recent article on the American Woman republished here. It appears to me that Dr. Sokoloff, to whose book you refer, has stated only a partial truth. My observations, as those of a native citizen and older man, go considerably further.

Speaking of the rule and omitting exceptions, I am prepared to state that the American woman is inferior to the women of other nations in certain characteristics which are part and parcel of womanhood.

As a school girl, she is disinclined toward studies calculated to cultivate such characteristics. In the home, she is willful, lacking respect, avaricious: the horseleach's daughter. When she goes into society, it is as a neurotic straining every nerve to capture and keep the center of the stage. And if she enters business, she demands equality with her male fellow-workers while exacting all the deference and exemptions that were formerly accorded woman as the so-called weaker sex.

After marriage, these tendencies are intensified. In society she grotesquely forgets her age. She is a neglectful mother, a worse wife. She considers housework menial and regards her husband's business as beneath her interest, which concerns itself solely with the money that business gives him to give her. As a means of getting more money from him, she has substituted the methods of the gangster for those of the "dip:" she used to go through his pockets; now she holds him up. The spectacle of an American wife breakfasting with her husband is a bitter commentary, in eloquent silence, upon American woman.

Compare her with the French wife, always desirous of retaining her husband's love and always sharing his business interests, never exploiting him. Or with the wives of the old Russia or the present Hungary and the Balkans, for whom the wedding is not the end of a romance, but the beginning. The devotion of an Irish wife or sweetheart puts the indifference of the American sweetheart or wife to shame.

The modernization of the Turkish woman has worked no such change in her. Even under Fascism, the Italian girl never prefers ridicule to no attention at all. Even under the Spanish Republic, the Spanish woman, if she regrets her lost youth, never, by attempting to imitate youth, makes her age ridiculous. The German wife remains a wife and mother even after she becomes a National Socialist.

Surely, the collapse of the American girl and woman must be inherent in her temperament rather than the result of any social or economic conditions.

In my opinion, there is only one woman less successful in the art of womanhood than the average American woman. That supreme failure is the average English woman.

You quote Dr. Sokoloff as holding the opinion that the American girl is really romantic, but sturdily suppresses the tendency. All the facts go to show that she is really unromantic, but nauseatingly pretends to romance—for sordid reasons.

You quote Dr. Sokoloff as saying that the American girl's suppression is due to inhibition. All the facts go to show that she has nothing to suppress—that her attitude is one of nearly unalloyed selfishness.

Don't mistake me. I do not court any personal controversy with you or anybody else. I am speaking calmly, in scientific generalizations and without personal prejudice, from the findings of long and objective study.

There was a great deal to be said against the conditions imposed by American man upon American woman in times past, but there is more to be said against the conditions which the American woman imposes upon the American man—and, what is worse, upon herself—in these times.

Equality of the sexes is common justice—insofar as nature permits it. The old double standard was detestable; but the new double standard is also detestable. The American woman does not want equality: having got it, she wants superiority.

To any aloof and scientific mind, her impulse is obvious. Like most once enslaved creatures, she wants to reduce her former slaver to the condition in which he held her. Her impulse is the impulse of sex-vengeance.

The Damage Huey Wrought.

HUEY LONG'S dictatorship in Louisiana has been so ruthless, bold and greedy it is doubtful that the rest of the country yet appreciates the damage to free government which has been done under his reign.

Unlike any of the dictators of the old world, Huey can hardly be said to have had patriotic or altruistic motives. He hated the Standard Oil and punished the old octopus severely for its misdeeds, but, although that was a popular course, Huey's motive was strictly personal. Early in his career he had had a chance to get rich suddenly and had been thwarted by the Standard Oil Co. That was why he hated and fought the Standard Oil when he came to power, and the benefits to the State and the people were only incidental to his own vindictive satisfaction.

He fought the gamblers and the vice trade in New Orleans, but not for any moral motives. In other parishes which he controlled gambling and prostitution were permitted, but in New Orleans the opposition controlled the graft, and Huey struck his enemies by shutting off an important source of their revenue.

He broke with the President not over any matter of justice for the Forgotten Man but over a matter of patronage, meaning jobs and power.

* * * *

IN all the bitter criticism of Hitler and Mussolini it has never seriously been claimed that they wanted to get rich themselves. But Huey, who recently announced that he was "lousy with money," appointed himself special attorney for the State of Louisiana to collect back taxes from big corporations, with authority to retain one-third of the money recovered as his pay. Inasmuch as the courts were his courts, this gave Huey the right to levy on the corporations for as much money as he wanted, with his conscience as his only guide.

He also put through a sort of minor Teapot Dome deal last fall whereby three of his leaders were authorized to drill 50 oil wells in the center of the State's rich oil preserve, paying the State a royalty of only one-eighth. Shortly after this a tax was passed which made it unprofitable for the Standard Oil to refine oil imported from foreign fields. That assured a market for the output of the 50 wells.

Under Huey's reign no taxpayer in Louisiana had a right to inspect the State's books to determine how much money had been collected or what had been done with it. Huey was the State, and he answered no questions.

In cities where the people elected his opponents, Huey destroyed self-government by passing State laws which permitted him to name the local municipal officials and employes. In time, individual business men, small dealers as well as "the interests," were unwilling to say a word against him for fear that Huey would punish them by boosting their taxes.

* * * *

HE was equally brutal to the common man and the soulless corporation when opposed. He organized a secret police force of unlimited size, called the Bureau of Criminal Identification, on the pattern of the Russian G. P. U. and Gerardo Machado's Cuban P. O. R. R. A., whose members listened to casual political comments and reported them to headquarters. He passed a State law giving himself power to hire unlimited numbers of election inspectors in obstinate communities to vote for his ticket at $5 each, the cost being chargeable to the local taxpayers.

All these are facts, incredible as they may seem. The laws are on the books of Louisiana, put there by Huey's Legislature at Huey's command under Huey's personal supervision. He stalked and swaggered about the legislative chambers, cursing and roaring his orders to the members, though he had no official standing before them. He cleared the press tables and put reporters entirely out of the chamber when he wished to prevent the appearance of clear accounts in the papers.

* * * *

LAST fall he expelled seven students from Louisiana State University for printing in their college paper a letter which criticized his methods. A few months later he declared martial law in Baton Rouge and established a censorship over the public press which forbade any criticism of the State government or any State official. This censorship continued for five months.

Huey was afraid of violence himself, yet took a cruel enjoyment in the slugging of individuals who displeased him. Though he had known a man for years on reasonably friendly terms, if that man annoyed him Huey would not hesitate to order his bodyguards to clout him over the head with a club.

"Give it to him, Joe!" he yelled. "Do anything you want to him," as Joe Messina, a retired hotel detective, bent a blackjack over the head of Leon Trice, a New Orleans newspaper photographer, last winter. A few months earlier, in the State House at Baton Rouge, Trice had been slugged from behind and kicked down a flight of stairs as Huey stood by laughing.

* * * *

HUEY'S own brutality toward all who criticized him, his pleasure in the suffering of others who were being inched along at the bayonet point or punched with rifle butts by his militia or beaten by his secret police, may have had some bearing on the desperation of the young doctor who made the suicidal attempt on his life. It was thoroughly understood that any man who attempted to kill Huey or even to punch him in Louisiana would have to be a martyr willing to die for it.

That Huey built roads and bridges and provided free school books nobody will deny, but nobody knows how much they cost or how much money was stolen in the process. His dictatorship was not yet complete. Huey was gradually copying the Hitler state, but Louisiana was not quite ready for blood purges and internment camps. That time was approaching, however, when the desperate citizen, Dr. Weiss, apparently decided that it was better to die fighting for his citizenship.

Wordsworth's Grave

By

William Lyon Phelps

IT MAY BE, if I quote some lines from the late Sir William Watson's poem called "Wordsworth's Grave," that some of the readers of this column may be once more reminded of the healing power of great poetry; of what it can do for our overwrought nerves; of its restorative, remedial influence.

Poet who sleepest by this wandering wave!
When thou wast born, what birth-gift hadst thou then?
To thee what wealth was that the Immortals gave,
The wealth thou gavest in thy turn to men?

Not Milton's keen, translunar music thine;
Not Shakespeare's cloudless, boundless human view;

Hell-Bent For Election

Let's Take A Look At Money Record, Says Warburg.

James P. Warburg, formerly one of the economic advisers of President Roosevelt, who appointed him financial adviser to American delegation to the World Economic Conference in 1933, has written an appraisal of the New Deal, the fourth chapter of which appears today. Mr. Warburg has long been a personal friend of Mr. Roosevelt. He has given his appraisal the general title, "Hell-Bent for Election." These articles do not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post. They are presented as an authoritative and penetrating analysis.

IV.

By James P. Warburg.

IN taking up the highly controversial topic of the currency under the New Deal let me make it clear that I am not here concerned with the rightness or wrongness of what has been done, but with its consistency or inconsistency with what the people voted for in 1932. To point out the inconsistency is not by any means to condemn as wrong. Some things that were done in the field of money and banking seemed to me right and justified; others seemed neither right nor justified. I have stated my views fully in two previously published books and in quite a number of speeches and articles.

What did we vote for as to currency in 1932?

Currency and fiscal policy go hand in hand.

We have already seen that we voted for reduced governmental expenditures and for a balanced budget, and that Mr. Roosevelt condemned the policy of his predecessor in incurring budget deficits. Coupled with this statement as to fiscal policy the Democratic platform had this to say about the currency:

"A sound currency to be preserved at all hazards." * * *

That statement meant, if it meant anything to the millions of people who voted for Roosevelt, a gold standard currency.

For one thing, you don't talk about "preserving" something that you haven't got. If Mr. Roosevelt had in mind making the basic changes in our currency which he afterward made, it seems to me he would have said: "A sound currency to be established and thereafter preserved."

Apart, however, from any more inference due to a choice of words, I think it is perfectly plain that no one thought he or she was voting for the reduction of the gold content of the dollar, nor for an irredeemable currency, nor for the repudiation of the gold clause in the bonds of the United States Government, when voting for "a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards"—any more than any one thought he or she was voting for a policy of piling up deficits, when voting for Mr. Roosevelt.

* * * *

THE usual defense made by the New Dealers is that the course of events forced the action taken and that the resulting New Deal dollar is a "sound currency." I have stated fully in my previous writings why I do not believe either statement correct, but that is not the point at issue here.

Suppose the "New Deal dollar" is a sound currency—which I do not think it is—certainly it is not what you or I or any one else thought of when we went to the polls in the autumn of 1932. If Mr. Roosevelt had said in 1932 what he said in his famous message to the London conference in July, 1933, do you think you would have voted for him? Suppose he had made this statement:

It's Not What The Platform Promised, Writer Insists.

"Old fetishes of so-called international bankers" (such as the gold standard) "are being replaced by efforts to plan national currencies with the objective of giving to those currencies a continuing purchasing power which does not greatly vary in terms of the commodities and needs of modern civilization."

You yourself—if you are not familiar with such things—might not have been disturbed by such a statement. It might even have appealed to your emotional dislike of "so-called international bankers." But I can assure you that it would have deeply disturbed every responsible business executive, every large employer of labor, and the leaders of the labor organizations themselves. It would have disturbed them so profoundly that the repercussions of their disturbance would have been felt in every home in the country. At the very least it would have led to an instant demand that Mr. Roosevelt define what steps he intended to take in order to produce such a "planned national currency" which "would not vary greatly in terms of commodities and needs of modern civilization."

* * * *

AND if, as the result of such questions, the Democratic platform had stated as to currency:

1. We favor the establishment of a currency redeemable in gold only when, as and if the Secretary of the Treasury shall consider it in the best interests of the Nation to have it redeemable.

2. We favor confiscating all gold at its present price and thereafter raising the price from $20.67 an ounce to $35.

3. We favor a managed currency, managed by vesting in the Executive at Washington complete and arbitrary authority to restore the price level of 1926 and thereafter maintain a dollar which will not vary in purchasing or debt-paying power, and

4. We favor repudiation of the gold clauses in the obligations of the United States Government.

I do not hesitate to say that if the Democratic platform had contained these or similar planks, Mr. Roosevelt would never have been elected. (I have not even attempted to write a plank which would do justice to the Rooseveltian ideas on silver.)

And why should it not have contained such planks?

Why not, if, as the platform itself states, "a party platform is a covenant with the people to be faithfully kept by the party when intrusted with power, and that the people are entitled to know in plain words the terms of the contract to which they are asked to subscribe."

Mr. Roosevelt did not make any very clear statements in amplification of the Democratic Party's currency plank. I must say that I, for one, did not think any amplification was necessary. Others, however, who knew him better than I, did express distrust of the general indorsement of "a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards." As it turns out, they were justified, but Mr. Roosevelt bitterly resented any such suspicion. Some of his statements in this regard are the following:

"It is obvious that sound money is an international necessity, not a domestic consideration for one nation alone."

Contrast this statement, made on July 30, 1932, with the message to the London monetary conference one year later which I have already quoted.

On November 4, 1932, Mr. Roosevelt made this striking statement:

"One of the most commonly repeated misrepresentations by Republican speakers, including the President, has been the claim that the Democratic position with regard to money has not been made sufficiently clear. The President is seeing visions of rubber dollars. This is only a part of his campaign of fear. I am not going to characterize these statements. I merely present the facts. The Democratic platform specifically declares: 'We advocate a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards.' That is plain English."

* * * *

IF that statement means anything at all it certainly does not mean an intention to redefine completely what a "sound currency" is, and to go ahead and establish precisely the kind of "rubber dollar" that Mr. Hoover was afraid of.

And, finally, how do you like this one:

"The business men of the country, battling hard to maintain their financial solvency and integrity, were told in blunt language in Des Moines, Iowa"—by President Hoover—"how close an escape the country had had some months ago from going off the gold standard. This, as has been clearly shown since, was a libel on the credit of the United States.

"No adequate answer has been made to the magnificent philippic of Senator Glass the other night in which he showed how unsound was this assertion. And I might add that Senator Glass made a devastating challenge that no responsible government would have sold to the country securities payable in gold if it knew that the promise, yes, the covenant embodied in these securities was as dubious as the President of the United States claims it was."

On March 12, 1933—a week after Mr. Roosevelt had become President—the United States Treasury issued $800,000,000 of obligations payable "in United States gold coin of the present standard of value"—the same covenant above referred to by Mr. Roosevelt a few days before he was elected.

Additional securities followed shortly after, bearing the same covenant.

On May 7, 1933, President Roosevelt, in a radio broadcast, announced his intention to repudiate this covenant.

And on June 5, 1933, the covenant was abrogated by act of Congress.

The point is not whether we agree or disagree with the President's judgment of reasoning. The point is that if he had such a conviction in regard to the gold clause and intended to act upon it, it would seem that the people had a right to know about it before they were asked to vote.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The export of gold from the continent of Europe apparently exercised a buoying effect on leading European monies against the dollar in world exchange markets yesterday. The dollar was again under some pressure in London.

The pound sterling advanced ⅝ of a cent in New York at $4.94⅛. Earlier in London the American unit gave ground at 4.93⅛ to the pound.

French francs rose .00¼ of a cent in New York to above the theoretical gold export point to America, to 6.59½ cents. In prior dealings in Paris the dollar followed an opposite trend to gain slightly at the equivalent of 6.591 cents to the franc.

Swiss francs rose .04 of a cent in New York at 32.56 cents and guilders were even after their recent softness, at 67.57 cents, which is below the metals export point from Amsterdam to New York.

Lire, officially controlled, advanced .01 of a cent to 8.16 cents in the face of the growing tension over the Ethiopian situation.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

On Biting Apples Again and Again.

YES, I was going to write about trees today, even though Isa Glenn accuses me of foreswearing literature and devoting myself to garden books. And, mulling over the subject of trees, as you mull over a well-filled dinner plate to see where you'll begin, I thought of the Joyce Kilmer line about trees and poems and how some one, Heywood Broun, I think, had called it the most insincere line ever written by a poet. Then up sprang a recollection of something Olive Moore had said on the same topic, and I had to get out her book, "The Apple Is Bitten Again," in order to quote it.

"Foremost Example of Mass Thinking," she writes in her clipped style: "'Poems are made by fools like me, but only God can make a tree.' Then God deals in second-rate goods. Trees are everywhere; there is still not a handful of good poems. An acorn can make a tree; try and make a poem."

Makes you a little mad, doesn't it? You feel like replying sharply: "All right, then, granted that half a dozen men have written first-rate poems. But not a man in 60 centuries has ever made an acorn!"

But is that a good, a cogent reply?

* * * *

THE trouble with looking up references—I'm going to postpone this column on trees—is that you have to go through too many enthralling topics before you find your quarry. Flipping over the pages of Miss Moore, though I reviewed them a couple of months back, was just too much, and I succumbed. Succumbed, that is, to the excitement of fresh thinking.

I came upon this: "City-Bound Crowd. To sacrifice yearly a few thousand handsome, fresh-picked virgins is paganism, savagery and cannibalism. To sacrifice daily a million smug, undecorative, self-patterned people is civilization, Christianity and progress." And, agreeing or not, the impetus there will last you a dozen evenings of late discussion with your cronies.

And the same with this: "Big City. Everything in a town is calculated to stimulate envy, greed, desire. Life is not to be grasped. Everything is out of reach. Everything is behind plate glass. And we still teach children the legend of Tantalus!"

* * * *

HEADY, bold, impassioned stuff, these thoughts of Miss Moore's. "Why the World Loves Its Musicians. It feels so safe. Nothing is so safe as an imitative artist. That is why the composer dies in poverty and the fashionable performer of the moment gets his thousand guineas for performing at the fashionable reception." Or this: "Final Judgment. Not by the master but by the pupil. Judge Karl Marx by Lenin. Lord Beaverbrook by the third-class compartment of a city-bound train."

And what will you say to her? That doesn't matter at this moment. Disagreeing and so refuting her as best you can, agreeing and so discovering examples of her accuracy on every hand, we are all led to do some particle of thinking for ourselves. A rare, very rare thing, that. Even the best of apples have to be bitten again and again.

The Once Over

The Breathing Spell.

President Roosevelt's announcement that business may have a breathing spell has everybody inhaling and exhaling with some degree of normalcy again. Here and there it is a little difficult to determine whether a man is breathing or hissing, but the general result has been good.

* * * *

You wouldn't think a letter authorizing deep breathing would pep up a nation so much.

* * * *

The country went from short to long pants overnight.

* * * *

Old Dr. Roosevelt became a pulmonary specialist after three years of practice in everything from chiropractic to general surgery, during which the patient was never sure whether it came under the head of treatment or pursuit.

* * * *

He was still suffering from dizziness, spots before the eyes, hysteria and assorted jitters when the doctor announced a respite.

* * * *

It had all the earmarks of an impromptu decision made in casual correspondence with a curious newspaper publisher, but it was too well timed to have been entirely accidental. The President may not like the horse and buggy days, but in a pinch he goes back to that ancient institution, the letter to the editor.

* * * *

Mr. Howard told Franklin that the business men of America were so frightened they were gasping even when relaxed, and he urged that the President assure them of a breathing spell. The President gave the assurance so quickly that it took the G. O. P.'s breath away.

* * * *

For the first few days the Republican response was entirely nasal.

* * * *

In the case of some of Mr. Roosevelt's most prominent critics, the reaction seemed like a demonstration of halitosis.

* * * *

The only question now is whether the Great White Father of the New Deal can be depended on by the deep-breathing public, or whether Franklin will have another forgetful spell and devaluate the breath again.

* * * *

He expresses complete satisfaction with his work in the White House, says no responsible party would dare to go before the voters with a repudiation of his accomplishments, and declares it looks like a wonderful winter.

* * * *

All together, boys, take a deep breath!

* * * *

And exhale as if you weren't still suspicious.

Cascadilla After Rain.

Cascadilla after rain
Wakes a well-forgotten pain,
Bears across the yellow flood
The old, the undesired mood.

Caught into the swelling current,
I, too, am drawn within a torrent.
Cascadilla, after rain,
Let me not grow young again!
DAVID WILKINS.

We Stand Corrected.

Hi—I do not care whether Mr. Smith pronounces "radio" in a manner to suit the professors of the Brain Trust. He pronounces the word "America" properly and patriotically.—Mr. Hearst. It would be a difficult trick if he didn't, don't you think? (The Once Over, August 30.)

He doesn't, and I think it's a very natural trick. Mr. Smith, like most of his countrymen, says "Amurrica." F. M.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Business slackened on the stock exchange yesterday and priced eased somewhat. Operators were cautious over the uncertainties of the foreign political situation. Argentine rails and a few industrials were steady exceptions. Gilt-edged securities pared their early losses and the market closed irregular.

Paris—The uncertainty of the international political situation and the irregularity of the Wall Street market helped make traders on the bourse hesitant yesterday. Profit taking and short selling caused declines in international issues and French industrials. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—Prices opened irregularly on the boerse yesterday, but prices firmed later. The closing was inactive but sustained.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Sept. 10 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agrl.). Wool continued to move in large volume on the Boston market. A rather broad selection of wools was included in sales, and prices were very firm to slightly higher, compared with quotations at the close of last week. Strictly combing medium grade Ohio fleeces moved at 32@33 cents in the grease for 56s, ⅜ blood and at 31@32 cents for 48s, 50s, ¼ blood. Substantial quantities of similar grade strictly combing territory wools sold at 63@66 cents, scoured basis, for 56s, ⅜ blood and at 59@61 cents for 48s, 50s, ¼ blood.

Rialto Theater Reopened by "Harmony Lane," Based on Life of Stephen Foster

Songs Outshine Story in Film On 9th Street

'Annapolis Farewell,' and Not 'Girl Friend,' Next at Metropolitan.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Gerald G. Gross,

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

"HARMONY LANE," Mascot picturization of a story by Milton Krims, adapted by Joseph Santley and Elizabeth Meehan, based on the life of Stephen Collins Foster. Featuring Douglass Montgomery, Adrienne Ames and Evelyn Venable, with Joseph Cawthorn and William Frawley. Directed by Joseph Santley. Previewed Saturday, September 7.

If ever a "family" moving picture was made, this is it. Clean as the teeth of the foremost hound chasing Eliza over the ice in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" (which, incidentally, appeared about the same time as "O Susanna"), "Harmony Lane" has other good points, too. The greatest of these in the resume of the best known songs of Stephen Collins Foster.

It was fitting and proper that the film makers should invoke the shade of America's beloved composer of plantation melodies and sob ballads, especially at this time when music is so very marketable on the screen. It is somewhat regrettable that Mascot Pictures slipped a bit on the casting, for in every other respect they did creditably.

Before continuing further, however, it might be well to mention that "Harmony Lane" is at the Rialto, which was reopened yesterday by Tom Moore after many months of Ninth street darkness, and that the "Southernaires," colored quartet, and Kathleen Lawlor, soprano, are added attractions.

Douglass Montgomery, it seems to us, is too much his naive, juvenile self in the role of Stephen Foster. Evelyn Venable, as the girl he loved, is pretty but quite stiff. Adriene Ames apparently caught the spirit of Jane McDowell, the conniving woman who lured Foster into marriage, and Joseph Cawthorn, cast in a typical Cawthorn part, succeeds in the projecting of Kleber, Susan's (Evelyn Venable) music teacher and Foster's close friend.

William Frawley is either very, very good or very, very bad as Al Christy, "the best minstrel man in the world." The decision rests on the authenticity of the delineation. If Christy, in real life, was the sort of fellow who was a combination of fop, drunkard, egotist, plagiarist and friend-in-need that Director Santley and Actor Frawley would have you believe, then the latter's performance is very, very good. If too many liberties have been taken in the portrayal, then Mr. Frawley is not only guilty of misrepresentation, but also very, very bad.

Knowing little of the life of Stephen Foster, we cannot presume to say whether "Harmony Lane" is or is not faithful to fact. The picture takes up in the year 1848 in Pittsburgh, where Foster was born and lived the first half of his short life. Therefore, Frances Welles, who was his first love, is not introduced, for this friendship began in 1840, when he was a student in Athens (Pa.) Academy.

Singers on the Stage.

Jilted by Susan Pentland, his sweetheart in "Harmony Lane," Foster marries Jane Denny McDowell, a true episode. It is also true that this union proved unhappy to both parties and that Foster died tragically in New York in 1884, age 37. Actually, his death was accidental; the picture, either intentionally or otherwise, gives the impression that he committed suicide.

But "Harmony Lane" will be appreciated the more if one forgets to look for historical flaws, or any other kind, and just sits back to enjoy once again the nostalgic beauty of "Old Folks at Home" and "My Old Kentucky Home," the jolly swing and lyrics of "O Susanna" and the simple charm of "Old Black Joe." Their rendition makes up for everything. And there isn't much to make up for — maybe those remarks about casting errors come under the head of hair-splitting anyhow.

On the stage, Kathleen Lawlor sings sweetly in a prologue to the picture. The "Southernaires" add no little to the program with their offering of Foster tunes. It should be noted that the former, assisted by the "crinoline girls," appears only at 3:15, 7 and 9 p. m. daily, while the "Southernaires" are on at 3, 4:40, 8:25 and 10:25 p. m.

John J. Payette, Warner Bros. zone manager, yesterday announced the appointment of W. Claude Land as manager of the Home Theater. Last Friday this column gave advance information. Mr. Land would become the Home's chief, succeeding Arthur Kilburg, promoted to managership of Warner's Colony Theater. Walter Cannon becomes assistant manager of the Central, taking the place vacated by Mr. Land (Mr. Payette scooped us on that one).

To correct any false conclusion which may have been caused by last week's announcement that Guy Wonders, production manager for the Earle, had been promoted to the post of district theater manager, Mr. Payette yesterday made the following statement:

"Mr. Wonders has been booking the stage attractions for the Earle Theater since we inaugurated the policy of vaudeville and photoplays five years ago, and will continue to do so, in addition to his supervision of all our theaters in the State of Maryland.

"Mr. Wonders is so well acquainted with vaudeville agents and performers that, through the Warner Bros. Service, in New York, he will also book vaudeville for all the Warner theaters in this territory. This includes theaters in the States of Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia."

George A. Crouch, assistant to Mr. Payette, continues in that capacity. In point of service, he is the oldest employe of Warner Bros. in this zone, his career having started in 1908 with Harry M. Crandall.

Mary O'Brien Rubin, former wife of Comedian Benny Rubin, was married yesterday in Los Angeles to Ned Blanc, owner of a dress shop chain . . . "She Couldn't Take It" is the new and permanent title of Columbia's starring vehicle for George Raft and Joan Bennett . . . Jane Wyatt's first picture for Universal this season, "Strangers at the Feast," will go into production next Monday . . . Bela Lugosi is back on the West Coast and will begin work on "The Invisible Ray" with Boris Karloff . . . Richard Arlen has a headache trying to work out an agreement on the support of his 14-year-old daughter . . . the mother is Mrs. Ruth Austin Mattimore, who divorced Arlen 12 years ago . . . his present wife is Jobyna Ralston and they have a son, two . . . Sylvia Sidney, now on view at the Earle in "Accent on Youth," is scheduled to do the leading feminine role in "Burlesque" this winter . . . remember the version of six years ago, starring Hal Skelly and Nancy Carroll, which was titled "Dance of Life?" . . . Harold Arlen, who wrote the sensational song, "Stormy Weather," and E. Y. Harburg have composed the theme song of "Metropolitan," which will star Lawrence Tibbett . . . it's called "Last Night We Were Young" . . . Buck, the St. Bernard which is said to steal "Call of the Wild" from Clark Gable, is importantly cast in "The Country Beyond."

At Loew's Fox.

Literally slipping into Loew's Fox yesterday, we made a few discoveries. One was that the opening of "Dante's Inferno" is suspiciously remindful of the opening of Eugene O'Neill's "The Hairy Ape." Another—taking them in no regular order—was that someone is doing Eleanor Holm a great injustice by allowing her to go on the stage without a better make-up job. Miss Holm, incidentally, surprised us with her pleasant singing voice. A little coaching on the use of the hands, though, would do her no harm.

Still another discovery was that Bliss. Lewis and Ash, dancers, practically run off with the headline act which is supposed to belong to Art Jarrett and that the impersonators, Margot and Libby Robin, either should study their subjects more carefully or else go out and accumulate lots more talent.

Amateur Activities.

"Mr. Pim Passes By," A. A. Milne's well known comedy, will be presented September 20 in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium as the season's first production of the Y. M. C. A. Triangle Club. Charles C. Gillman is the director and the cast includes Clare Sargent, Marguerite Bohn, Rosemary Walker, Faith Howell, John Kendrick, A. L. Diket and Frederic Cole.

Forty-one parts are still open in the play "Peace on Earth," for which the New Theater Group will hold tryouts tonight. The place is 810 F street northwest, and the time is 8:30 o'clock.

For Next Week.

"Annapolis Farewell" will succeed "Page Miss Glory" at the Metropolitan on Friday instead of "Girl Friend," according to an announcement yesterday by the Warner offices. It was at the Metropolitan that "Annapolis Farewell" had its world premiere last month, following which it stayed a week at the Earle.

The red-haired girl has a more difficult problem than blondes and brunettes when it comes to clothes and cosmetics, says William Lambert, who gowned Dixie Lee and the other beauties in "Redheads on Parade," scheduled for Loew's Fox for a week beginning Friday.

Because Director Busby Berkeley wants the real thing in whatever he does, "Bright Lights" boasts genuine burlesque singers and dancers, a genuine stage manager and genuine newspaper photographers. They will be seen in the Joe E. Brown starring film, commencing Friday, at the Earle.

Strange as it seems, Eugene Pallette, the comical sheriff in "Steamboat 'Round the Bend," played romantic leads in silent pictures. "Steamboat," starring the late Will Rogers, follows Greta Garbo at the Palace Friday.

Stan Laurel used his palatial camping trailer as a dressing room while he and Oliver Hardy were working in "Bonnie Scotland," next at the Columbia.

Stop-the-Presses Note.

Toots Brawner, "dynamic dancer," is featured in the Bon Ton Girls company, which reopens the Gayety as a burlesque house next Sunday. The Gayety's policy will be the same as last season, with three shows daily—12 noon, 2:30 and 8:15 p. m.

For-the-Record Note.

It was written "fans" and not "face" in the line from yesterday's column that read: Watching Will (Rogers) as a Mississippi River pilot, winning a boat race and bringing two lovers together, his face will not linger long in contemplation of his death.

Mischief Behind the Fan in "Metropolitan"

Lawrence Tibbett, the fellow responsible for the hollywood invasion of opera singers because he led the way, is shown above in one of the more devilish moments in "Metropolitan," which should arrive about the time the first snow flies. His friend is—wrong! not Gloria Swanson—Alice Brady.

The Roadside

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

"TO DIE AT DAWN." The Roadside Theater presents a melodrama in four acts and six scenes under the direction of Anton Hardt, with settings by Edith I Allen and costumes by Dorothy Croissant. At the Roadside Theater, Rockville Pike. Reviewed Monday evening by Virginia Lee Warren.

THE CAST:

George Drake	Harold Stepler
Silent Dave	Ralph Fowler
Bob Nestor	John Edwards
John Lanyon	James Heaney
Governor of Kentucky	James Heaney
John Dodson	Kenn Romney
Jerry	William Phillips
Jim Marrell	Eugene Kressin
Sheriff Steve	Harry Westcott
Nellie Milward	Gail Dennis
Nancy Milward	Elinor Cox Karsten
Bess McCosh	Frances Grunt

Presented exactly the same as it was earlier in the Roadsiders' season, with the exception of a few changes in cast, "To Die at Dawn" scored all over again last night as a rootin', tootin' mellerdrammer replete with evil counterfeiters, storm-visaged heroes, damsels in distress and plenty of shootin'!

A sizable crowd defied threatening weather to journey up the Rockville pike and hiss at Villain Harold Stepler and cheer John Edwards and Gail Dennis, "a true son of Kentucky" and "the best gal in Kentucky," respectively. They were rewarded with a sound performance, played in just the right tempo.

The men folks come off with greater acting honors than their gals in this revival of "To Die at Dawn," although the cast is uniformly good. William Phillips, as "Jerry who talks in chunks," proves that a stuttering role can actually be funny. Harry Westcott is excellent as Sheriff Steve, a minor part as far as length is concerned. Harold Stepler, Eugene Kressin, John Edwards and Ralph Fowler also acquit themselves nobly, turning their respective parts to a succulent brown.

Gail Dennis is inane and insipid, as Nellie Milward is supposed to be, and succeeds beautifully in keeping a white dress immaculate during three months in Mammoth Cave. Elinor Cox Karsten is so-so as Nellie's ma. So is James Heaney, meaning so-so, in the two roles he assumes.

Direction, make-up and costuming are very good.

Last night's turnout was responsive not only to the play but also to the entr'acte "olio" numbers of Kressin, Edwards and Misses Dennis and Brunt, also the pantomime, "Heavy Odds and a Tough Steak," by Bill Phillips.

"To Die at Dawn" will be presented during the remainder of the week.

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, Sept. 10.

THEY are going to burn the Barbary Coast.

Over 800 extras, some holding flaming torches and others clearing the way with their guns, march down the main street of this famed Barbary district. They are going to burn it down.

WEISSMULLER.

It is after midnight. All big fire scenes are shot at night. Members of the Los Angeles Fire Department are watching. A fire doesn't always take direction. The scene is being shot on one of the back streets at the Warner studio, on which an exact reproduction of a section of the famed Barbary Coast has been built.

Director Lloyd Bacon gives the signal. The flaming horde, shooting and shouting, gallops down the street toward the main hotel, where James Cagney is standing in the lobby. They intend to capture him first, to hang him, before making the district their cigarette.

* * * *

The Barbary Coasters try to defend themselves and shoot it out from the various windows. The first march takes place about midnight. Director Bacon says: "Let's do it again." At 2:30 the torchbearers are doing the same march; the same men are shot and fall in the same manner. The noise of the guns, the angry mob of extras, the lighted torches make it interesting. A false move with a torch and there will be a fire before Director Bacon gets the necessary film.

It is a little after three in the morning. Director Bacon dismisses the entire company. They aren't going to burn the Barbary Coast tonight. Director Bacon has just discovered that he needs a reverse shot—that is, he must shoot the same scene from the opposite angle. He can't burn the Barbary Coast tonight because he needs it tomorrow.

* * * *

WHEN you see the flicker "Coronado," there will be a number, with Jack Haley singing the ditty "All's Well," while Eddy Duchin and his orchestra play it. It will take about six minutes, at the most, on the screen.

At 8 o'clock in the evening, all concerned gathered in a recording room to record the number, Haley sang, Duchin played the piano, leading the orchestra. There was a special conductor from the Paramount musical department actually conducting. Director Norman McLeod supervised. Two dancers, a gal, Angelo Blue, and a lad, Sam Brown, hoofed to the music. They had to help get the tempo right, for a chorus will be seen dancing in this sequence. There isn't a camera in the room. They are merely recording. Later the scene will be filmed to the playback of this recording.

At midnight, Haley is still singing, Duchin and the orchestra are still playing, Miss Blue and Mr. Brown are still hoofing, and the director is still waving the baton. Director McLeod calls time for lunch.

* * * *

According to the rules, work must stop every 5 hours to allow every one to eat. At 1 o'clock the entire troupe is back doing "All's Well." This time the position of the mike is changed to see if this will help get a good take. About 3 o'clock, a new conductor comes on to wave the baton; the other is tired. Haley, Duchin, Blue and Brown are still at it. It is a nice concert for those who can never get enough of Eddy Duchin and his orchestra. They are still recording. At 5 o'clock in the morning, there is a recess for coffee. Then the recording continues. At 8 o'clock in the morning, Director McLeod gets the perfect take. The company is excused.

* * * *

EDDIE DAVIS is playing himself in the flicker, "The Bouncer." Eddie is known to those who stay up late on Broadway as the singer of the risque songs at Leon and Eddie's. In the picture he runs a ship's cafe with William Frawley, and Eddie is supposed to entertain with the songs that made him a favorite on Broadway, but there aren't any censors sitting at the table at Leon and Eddie's. They go there knowing what to expect and get it. The movies have to be different. "The Bouncer" will be shown at matinees when children are in the audience. There aren't kiddies at Leon and Eddie's at 5 o'clock in the morning; at least, there didn't used to be. So Eddie's ditty, "Damn Clever, These Chinese" is called "Darn Clever, These Chinese," and the lyrics are completely cleaned up.

* * * *

Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan, Benita Hume and John Buckler are sitting in a dressing room waiting to wade through mud for a scene of "Tarzan Escapes." While waiting, they sit about drinking tea.

"This is our only contact with civilization," says Miss Hume. They discuss the mud they have to walk through and previous "Tarzan" flickers.

"Are you and Maureen married yet?" asks Mr. Buckler. "You've been in that jungle a long time."

"Practically," answers Weissmuller. "After two 'Tarzan' pictures she becomes my common law wife."

Late Drinkers Give Hotel Host Lots of Grief

City's Deadline on Cocktail Is Rigidly Observed at Hamilton.

By Chanticleer.

Dick Butler, your host at Hamilton's rainbow room, is muttering through his beard these days and reflecting on the ease with which ordinances and regulations are put on the books by the city fathers—and the grief which results in abiding by them.

It seems that the rainbow room is obeying rigidly the particular liquor regulation which requires that all bottles, glasses, jiggers and other appurtenances for drinking be removed from the table promptly at 12 midnight on Saturday nights and equally on the nose at 2 on week nights.

Most distressing and disagreeable reactions set in, according to Host Butler, when the snatching and grabbing begins at the appointed hour.

• • • •

To the left we have a young man who is progressing nicely with his wooing. The girl has said "no" consistently, but tonight it looks as though it's going to be Lohengrin and Niagara. And then, just as things get rosy, along comes a waiter and says "12 o'clock" and cleans the table off as neatly as a magician.

Over to the right a business deal is going nicely and the home town representative gets expansive and says, "waiter, two more of the same." And the waiter has to say, "sorry, sir, I can't serve you another because it would be one minute before 2 when I arrived here with it and you couldn't drink it by two. And furthermore, you'll have to drink that half glass you have or I'll have to take that away from you in another two minutes." Keeping his eye on his watch all the time.

• • • •

So, if you have half your old-fashioned snatched away from under your very eyes just as the clock tolls two, you'll have some consolation in knowing that your irritation is equaled only by Dick Butler's misery.

• • • •

Judy Ellington has started already to doll up fiet to kill for the big event next week. Just a year ago, it was that Judy first sang with Bill Strickland and his Capitolians. And she's been at the Lotus Restaurant ever since.

• • • •

The Hangar Club is the only roof left with the sudden closing of the Club Habana on the Arlington Roof. And the Hangar Club roof is not only left . . . but it's open from sundown until sun-up. If there's one thing more elegant than a warm summer evening under the star-lit skies . . . it's an early fall evening under those same stars. Try it.

• • • •

Mildred Clarke is the stately and comely young persons who seats you so graciously and smilingly at the Mayfair . . . with all the red, white and blue headgear. . . . To use those famous words, "I have been requested to announce" that there is dancing agoing on these Thursday and Saturday nights at the Elks Club, with music by Dave McWilliams and his orchestra.

• • • •

Every Tuesday night will be Carnival Night at the Dude Ranch, out Baltimore pike way. Carnival Night means confetti, hats, noise-makers and other extra goings-on. The Crystals are heading the floor show this week and Jimmy Staley, Dick Bea and Dolly Dare, soloists, are on the bill because of the favor showed them by the customers last week. Ralph Garren's Orchestra plays nightly. Floor shows twice nightly and dancing until 2.

• • • •

Ye olde hammers and ye olde sawe are making plenty of racket on the west side of Connecticut avenue, just above L, these days. If you peeked in a side window you'd see lights burning and workmen hustling about . . . all in preparation of the reopening of Club Habana at the old winter season stand. The gala event is set for September 27. Better get your reservation in. And the old Saturday luncheon for dancing, which clicked with the patrons last year, will be resumed. Host Scott is smacking his lips over the talent he has contracted for the opening.

• • • •

Maryland Club Gardens has decided to make a few decorative changes in the winter portion of this popular suburban spot . . . and the announcement that appeals to me is that the name will be changed for the indoors months of the year to "Winter Garden." Hilaire Hiler has been employed to do the change-over in decorations. Hiler formerly opened the Jockey Club in Paris, which he personally decorated, and comes to Maryland Club Gardens from "doing over" New York's Hotel Lafayette. The motif will . . . ahh, Oriental. Four large murals of Moorish design as a finishing touch. For the nonce, dance with Al Barkley and his New Yorkers every night.

• • • •

Hi-de-ho. "Trucking to Town" is holding forth this week at the Cotton Club, fresh in with a star-studded cast from Harlem . . . with Tommy Miyles and his band of 15 chocolate musicians, 10 dusky beauties . . . and Chuck and Chuckles in person, comedy vendors, who lead in the ranks of the colored show business. They appeared here last, as I recall, with Cab Calloway at the Fox. In support is Rubberlegs Williams, late of New York's Cotton Club . . . and Drucilla Drew, singing-dancing star who really does "St. Louis Blues." What a show!

• • • •

Two lovely young blondes—the Andrew Twins—headline things at the Lotus this week under the smiling guidance of Al Norton. And Mary Chrysler is there doing interpretive waltzes . . . Cyn Clair and Don Eddy in a "College Rhythm" specialty . . . De Casta and Lee in some whirlwind specialties . . . and Horton Spurr with a new bag of acrobatic and slom motion Behind that hube accordion are Duval and Ross, who entertain at the Mayfair Restaurant of all Nations. Name the number—and they sing it. And in any one of seven or eight languages.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

The Gold Rush.

New York, Sept. 10.

Take it for what it's worth as barometer of better conditions, but the physical fact remains that on Saturday night, Broadway hot spots were jammed as they haven't been jammed since gold rush days of 1929 . . . Waves of people rolled over the Stem like breakers crashing over Waikiki Beach, but instead of whitecaps, the Broadway variety left a trail of dollars when the waves subsided . . . Night clubs, theaters and hotels all have been affected by the business spurt, with the bigger hotels almost completely sold out for weeks in advance . . . The inrush of customers for the Max Baer-Joe Louis fight this month will clog the Stem with additional thousands . . . Smoke in the Ohio Valley is one indication of better times, for when the smokestacks pour out plumes of black smoke, it means that the mills and factories are in action . . . The standing room only signs on Broadway are still another indication that money is flowing freely, and right now the S. R. O. placards are hanging on every Broadway doorknob.

BAER.

• • • •

It is heartening to push your way through the glutted traffic lanes of the Queerialto, heartening to walk into theaters and find every seat sold with hundreds of people standing in the aisles . . . During the lean years of the depression, when panic tightened its grip, Broadway was a dismal thoroughfare . . . On my nightly rounds, I'd visit eight or ten places, and in each one the story would be the same . . . The headwaiters and the owners all sang the same dirge . . . Bad weather was keeping the customers at home, or perhaps it would be the approach of the holidays, or the departure of the holidays . . . "But tomorrow night, things will pick up" . . . Broadway then was the street of manana, the street of tomorrows that never arrived . . . How the owners held out and kept in action from 1930 through 1934 I'll never know . . . A lot of them would have collapsed had it not been for repeal . . . That was a shot-in-the-arm administered at the psychological moment, for most of the cabaret owners were hanging on the ropes . . . Repeal was the bell that saved 'em, because it rang the bells of the cash registers.

• • • •

The grass that grew on Broadway during the lean years now resolves itself into Long Green . . . Headwaiters, dazed looks on their faces, are not yet certain that crowds of customers aren't the fantastic figures of a mirage . . . Theater managers stand in their lobbies and watch unbelievingly as ticket-buyers stand in line at their boxoffices . . . Hotel managers have an incredulous note in their voices as they tell patrons that there is only one unrented suite available . . . Happy days are here again, and Broadway, punch-drunk from the beating it absorbed from 1930 to 1934, when it was hit with everything but the water bucket, surveys the amazing panorama with a vacuous grin on its face . . . At first they thought it was the usual business pick-up that follows Labor Day, but when the rush took on the proportion of a stampede, they realized the significance of it . . . Broadway finally had found green pastures.

• • • •

I'm sorry that Billy Lahiff and Sime Silverman couldn't have lived to see their street in full flower again . . . Lahiff was the owner of the Tavern, and he'd been on Broadway for 20 years . . . Sime was the publisher of Variety, greatest of theater trade papers, with its finger on the pulse of every city in the world . . . Lahiff and Silverman could have provided graphs on the downward swing of the slump, one in terms of food, the other in terms of national box office . . . Lahiff's graph of the depression years would have been a parade of I. O. U.'s from actors and night club performers, an endless chain of "tabs" signed by Broadwayites who ate at his place, for as the slump progressed, the I. O. U.'s increased in volume as a wider and wider circle was affected . . . "Things will get better," Lahiff would say patiently . . . "Broadway will come back," Sime would say . . . Now that it has come back into its own, Billy and Sime aren't here to enjoy it, and that's too bad, because to them the Stem was peculiarly their own personal boulevard, though Lahiff was a Newporter and Silverman was a Syracusan.

• • • •

I'll leave to sober economists the technical explanation of the renaissance that is occurring, and they can hazard a guess as to the endurance powers of the present gold rush . . . All I can do is report the fact that it has occurred, that the street is crowded with buyers, in contrast to those not-so-distant days when there was a predominance of sellers, and few takers . . . Broadway is first to feel the business uplift because the Stem is on a cash basis . . . Other businesses, where credit is extended for 30 to 90 days, get at best a delayed reaction, but on Broadway the cash comes rattling into the tills and cash boxes, and at the end of the night, the answer is an immediate positive or negative . . . Broadway was first to feel the slump for the same reason, and now it is the first to sense that the tide has turned, that the storm has evidently beaten itself out, and that the public is coming out of the storm cellars . . . Strike up the band, let the good news ring out . . . Ladies and gentlemen, I've often been asked the greatest thrill I've ever had . . . I think it has come in penning this column of good news, in setting down in black and white the exciting report that Broadway is back in the money again.

Drive Smashes Keystone State Bootleg Rings

Vigilant Enforcement Puts Alcohol Racketeers Out of Business.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia.—The big bootlegger has been dealt a smashing blow and is on the run in Pennsylvania, according to Edward O. Dougherty, acting supervisor of the Federal alcohol tax unit.

Vigilant enforcement of prevailing liquor laws and regulations by Federal, State and municipal governments has forced many illicit alcohol racketeers out of business.

"Our figures show that the only ones trying to beat the law are the small fry," Dougherty said.

The value of bootlegging equipment is coming down, according to the supervisor.

Dougherty revealed that equipment taken from 170 illegal distilleries during June of this year was valued at only $40,000. He recalled that 51 men were arrested in December of last year and equipment worth more than $100,000 was seized.

New Laws Given Credit.

While State and municipal law officials were given praise for aiding in the concerted drive against the bootleggers, Dougherty said he believed the campaign was made easier as result of newly enacted legislation.

He pointed out that Congress can boast of a real achievement when it established regulations over sale of molasses and corn sugar. For it was through those materials that bootleggers were able to make illegal liquor on a large scale at prices low enough to attract all classes of consumers.

Formerly the bootlegger could buy molesses and sugar in any quantity and "no questions asked." Nowadays, the dealers must report large sales and keep the names of the purchaser.

Renaissance Is Seen as Fall Fashion Theme by Tobe, World-Famous Stylist

Flower Vogue Takes Society Set by Storm

Capital Store Is Offering an Array of Artificial Bouquets and Buds.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SMART WOMEN are going to look like a garden in full bloom this winter, what with the vogue of artificial flowers which is taking the fashion world by storm. Flowers will be especially chic when worn in the hair this season. A bouquet or a single bud tucked among her curls will make the weariest housewife or the hardest working stenographer feel like a sweet young thing of 17 again.

A local store has some adorable hair ornaments made up in different flowers. They vary from the simplest single gardenia to more elaborate arrangements which are piled high in the hair, reminiscent of the days of the Empress Eugenie. The colors come in all shades, although the majority are white, to match any evening gown. Even fruits and flowers have been used, with fetching effect. Prices start at $1.

Powder That Really Sticks.

THERE'S been a revolution in the powder world! A well-known beauty expert has invented an absolutely new process of making powder which results in a cosmetic finer and more clinging than anything of this kind known before.

It seems that all powder except this particular brand is made by sifting the particles through silk. This kind, however, is spun around in a great machine, which allows more ingredients to enter than if it were shifted through silk. The result is a powder that won't come off at the first warm moment, leaving your nose gleaming like a headlight. It will stick to you through thick and thin, imparting a smooth, satiny finish to your skin. It comes in a special moistureproof jar, and costs only $1.

Roomy Knitting Bags.

NOW THAT winter is just around the corner, it's time to start thinking about knitting some warm, woolly suits and sweaters. A local store will start you on the right path with its grand knitting bags, big, roomy affairs, large enough to hold an entire dress and yards and yards of wool. They come in a colorful tweedy material, lined with elegant celanese or sateen. Just the thing in which to carry your knitting to the movies or a bridge party. No fumbling around with lumpy, towel-wrapped parcels if you treat yourself to one of these commodious and handsome bags. Their use, of course, is not confined exclusively to knitting, for they are also ideal for carrying one's sewing, or for knicknacks.

Convenient Yarn Holders.

PROSPECTIVE knitters should also see the yarn holders which are to be found in the same store. They are fascinating, oval-shaped affairs, out of which the yarn flows in a smooth untangled stream. They can also be used conveniently for string or cord. These holders come in blue or rose and are priced at $1.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Contest Theme Is Economical Dinner Menus

THE POST recipe contest this week has taken a new twist. Economical dinner menus are such a necessary factor for the woman who is keeping house on a limited budget that we are using this as a subject for this week's contest.

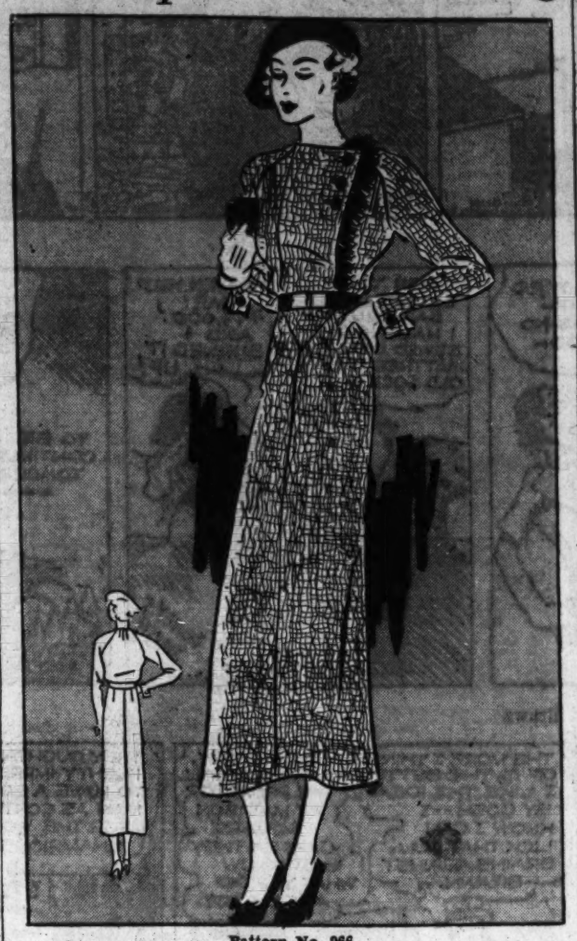

Though this subject requires a little more thought than a single recipe, it is not difficult. Simply tell us about your most satisfactory dinner menu. Vegetables, meat and dessert should be included and a recipe for the meat dish and dessert. Perhaps you have a menu that boasts an excellent meat substitute or an interesting casserole dish that combines meat and vegetables. If so, remember that other housewives will be interested in hearing about it.

Twelve prizes of $1 each will be awarded this week as usual, and don't forget that winning a $1 prize will make you eligible for one of the three grand prizes—a Sunbeam Mix Master, a G. E. Hotpoint coffee maker, and a Dominion sandwich grill—offered by The Washington Post and the National Electrical Supply Co. at the end of the contest.

This week Mrs. Claribel Welsh, head of the food and nutrition department of the college of home economics of the University of Maryland, has been asked to select the winning dinner menus.

This dinner should be economcial, nourishing and appetizing. Send your menu and recipes to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post and be sure they are posted in time to reach this office not later than Saturday morning.

This Slenderizing Frock Is Simple, But Stunning

Pattern No. 966.

A SIMPLE dress that makes one look slim and perfectly groomed is one of the most difficult to achieve—and the most stunning. The design must be right, the cut must be expert and the pattern perfect. All of these fine features are embodied in the frock pictured above.

It looks so utterly simple, but it is the result of much careful attention to detail. The cut of the skirt, the raglan sleeves, the trim vestee, dart tucks in just the right places—all are carefully planned for the woman whose figure demands that she wear good clothes, expertly designed. The pattern may be had in sizes 34 to 46. Size 40 requires 2¾ yards of 54-inch material and ⅝ yard of novelty pleating.

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

Double Begets Double.
1523.

The habit of bidding in a fast moving auction sale or a free bidding contract game is equally contagious. And perhaps the most contagious of all the bids is the double. Once the doubling starts in good earnest, it is rare that a final contract is played undoubled.

With partner showing every evidence of a strong hand, East was unable to resist the temptation to double on his five trumps in today's deal. Yet, although the defense was perfect, Declarer could not be prevented from scoring the nine tricks for which he had contracted.

East-West vulnerable
West, Dealer

The bidding. (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs).

West	North	East	South
1◇	Dbl. (1)	Pass	1♠
2◇	3♣ (2)	Pass	3♡
Dbl. (3)	3♠	Dbl. (4)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A light Takeout Double, due to East-West's advanced score, North's short major suits make a two-club overcall preferable.
2—Compelled to rebid to protect the score, North now regrets having doubled originally, since he cannot raise spades with only three.
3—Somewhat questionable, but North-South appear to be flagflying. West hopes that partner can double spades.
4—Partner can, but perhaps unwisely.

The Play.

West made the fine opening of the singleton Queen of spades, but to no avail. On the bidding, West was marked with the top card strength and length in hearts. East's double could therefore be base only on trumps, and Declarer accordingly assumes West's opening lead to be a singleton, particularly since, after winning the King in Dummy and leading a club which West won with the Ace, the trumps were not continued. West returned the Queen of hearts which was won by Dummy's Ace, and the Queen of clubs cashed, Declarer discarding a diamond. A club lead was ruffed in the South hand, the King of hearts cashed, and a low heart trumped in Dummy. Now another club was played from Dummy and East, realizing the futility of trumping, discarded a diamond. South won this trick with the spade eight and played his last heart which Dummy ruffed with the Ace, East discarding his last diamond. A fifth round of clubs found East compelled to trump, but to no avail. If he trumped over-ruffed with the ten. The cross-with the Jack, South's ten would be high. When he trumped low, South ruff had thus enabled Declarer to score his nine tricks and South's remaining losers were doubly won by West's high diamonds and East's three trumps. Unfortunately for East-West, winning the same trick twice counts no more than once.

Bossing Family Is a Difficult Job for Minor

By Alice Clarissa Richmond,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

MARY insisted that when she was left in charge of her younger brothers and sisters she felt like the "League of Nations." She was responsible for them, but had no way of enforcing her authority. Her parents did not permit her to punish any of the youngsters, but if anything went wrong in their absence, Mary was held to blame.

Probably they were right in forbidding Mary to administer justice. Children are apt to be too severe on each other, and Mary would have had to be a most exceptional child had she been able to manage the tribe with perfect equity and without taking advantage of her position of power.

This being the case, however, she should not have been left in charge as frequently as she was nor held so strictly to account for the behavior of the others. There come occasions in every large family when some crisis arises which necessitates the absence of both parents. If there is no maid and no outsider who can be called in, an older child may have to be left in charge.

But such crises cannot and should not occur often. It is not fair to burden any child with respnsibility ahead of time. Later she will, in all probability, have her own children to look after, and it seems hardly just that she should be forced to carry the load of motherhood ahead of time with none of its compensations.

If and when she must be left in charge, the younger children had better suffer a little extra severity and possibly some injustice rather than leaving the older child helpless in the face of insubordination. Give her the privilege of enforcing her undesired authority in some way, and make it very clear to the small fry that they must obey and respect the vice regent in their parents' absence.

"Diurnal's" Attention Called to Luncheons and Teas at Y. W. C. A.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I think "Diurnal" exposed a true social need in her request of today (Monday, September 9) for information about daytime interests for women who have neither children nor jobs. Before the war, women as a class held few jobs, but now, even though less than half the women work, nearly all the organized social and cultural interests seem to be held for this class—of evenings. It is my observation that churches do not fill this social need to quite the extent they used to.

• • • •

I am told there are two noonday luncheon clubs which meet at the Y. W. C. A., at which such things as current events are discussed and which do not restrict their membership or attendance to women in business.

I hope other readers of your most helpful column will also contribute their suggestions and opinions on this interesting subject. Sincerely,
L. L.

Talk to Mrs. Ketchum.

DEAR L. L.: Thank you for your suggestion about the Y. W. C. A. Inquiry discloses the fact that this organization does, indeed, provide a winter social program which should be of particular interest and value to women who, like "Diurnal," have neither job nor child and consequently find it necessary to create other demands upon their time.

• • • •

Such women are eligible to attend the monthly fellowship luncheon and monthly forum teas given by the "Y" beginning in October. Representatives of other lands and authorities on international subjects speak at the luncheons, and other men and women distinguished for their contributions to this country's political and cultural life are often honor guests at the teas.

• • • •

Mrs. Irving Ketchum, executive of the education department of the Y. W. C. A., who gave me this information, added that if "Diurnal" cares to come to her office, on the sixth floor of the "Y" main building at Seventeenth and K streets northwest, she will be glad to tell her about the organization's full social program. Or she may write, requesting that her name be placed on the mailing list, and she will regularly receive announcements of forthcoming social events. Mrs. Ketchum suggested "Diurnal" might be interested in doing some volunteer light office work for the organization.

• • • •

After all, a sandwich and a glass of milk eaten in the company of some well-liked co-worker, can be quite as stimulating a social contact as any obtainable at the most elaborate luncheon seating the largest and most distinguished company. This being true, I suggest "Diurnal" give serious consideration to this bid for her services.

• • • •

If other readers will contribute suggestions as helpful as this given by L. L., "Diurnal" should not be long in finding the exact type of daytime social opportunity she seeks.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Colors Used in Paintings of Masters Will Be Found in Clothes, She Says

The Renaissance influence is apparent in formal frocks, but not in sports clothes, points out Tobe, internationally known stylist, whose business it is to keep well posted on the fashion news behind the scenes.

The Popularity of Jewel Trimmings, Accessories Forecast.

What is what in fashion? And why? Tobe, international stylist, gives you a peep behind the scenes in the following article, last in a series of interviews with outstanding fashion artists.

By Frances Mangum.

FASHION turns back the pages of history 500 years and more for its inspiration this season. Back to the time of the Medicis, of theartists Luini, Raphael, da Vinci and Angelico. Back to the Renaissance when colors, fabrics and jewels were rich and glowing, and superbly elegant.

It is Tobe, an internationally known stylist, who points an unerring finger to the Renaissance influence on clothes this fall, who says Renaissance is the fashion theme running clear and strong through the coming season.

Seated at her desk in her New York studio, Tobe took time out to tell what she saw on the fashion horizon.

Also Influence Dresses.

"We have already seen the unbelievable success of Renaissance hat fashions," she said, citing the halo hats inspired by Raphael Madonnas, and the Cenci berets, from the berets worn by the guards in the Renaissance play Les Cenci.

As for dresses, they show the Renaissance influence in four ways, she said. First, color; second, fabrics; third, jeweled accessories and trimmings, and fourth, style.

"The very colors which you see in the great paintings of that period, you will find in clothes this fall," Tobe said. "There are those three deep, glowing reds, a jewel-like shade, called Medici, the warm and glowing titian red and one a deep wine color. And then the purples, one called Lorenzo purple and a darker more subdued shade called Leonardo purple.

"In the golden brown family there is Borghese, a warm, honey beige, titian brown, a lovely new reddish light brown and a distant cousin of these, rust. There are four outstanding greens, Cellini green with bluish tones, Veronese green with more yellow in it."

Other colors which Tobe predicts a big future for are Raphael blue and jewel jade.

More Lavish Use of Fur.

Of fabrics and jewels, Tobe said: "Undoubtedly there will be more velvets and lames and brocades of all types. Really rich fabrics! And of course, a more lavish use of fur, jewel trimmings and accessories will be popular, also jeweled belts, collars, buttons and buckles—in fact jeweled necklaces and bracelets sewed right on the dress. All of these literally shriek Renaissance!"

The fourth influence, and most important, is the style.

"Renaissance styles are reflected only in formal clothes and dinner and evening gowns, wraps and hats," Tobe said. "They are suggested in our daytime clothes only so far as color and trimming are concerned, and in certain ruff necks, etc. I believe that our modern life demands daytime clothes especially planned for and suited to our modern daytime activities, to the places we go and the things we do.

"But in the realm of formal clothes the story is different. Here we can have glamorous, romantic picture fashions, and here the Renaissance influence is already making itself felt."

Three Definite Changes in Silhouette This Season Listed.

There has been a definite change in silhouettes this season, Tobe believes. She lists them thus:

The flared skirt silhouette, in which the skirt is definitely flared either by gores or by smart-shaped godets, or simply by a beautiful circular cut.

The draped silhouette, with skirt draped up at the front or at the side.

The classic, slender silhouette, which is ideal for informal or casual dresses.

Skirts Are Shorter.

Two 1935 fashion characteristics that run through all three are:

Skirts are shorter, varying from 10½ to 14 inches from the floor.

Bodices are all very soft, with draped or semidraped feeling.

Other interesting fashion points which she says characterizes the new mode are:

High, soft neckline usually draped but with many small collars as well.

Definite shoulder and sleeve interest.

Wider belts, many quite elaborate and definitely contributing to the trimming design of the dress.

Pipings and bindings particularly of velvet or lame on dark silks and wools which look very new and smart.

Digestive Disorders Are Analyzed

Slight Nausea on Waking Should Not Be Passed Off Lightly.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IN yesterday's article a few of the symptoms which are commonly attributed to dyspepsia were described. It was pointed out that there is really no such thing as dyspepsia, and that whenever symptoms of indigestion show themselves an attempt should be made to ascertain the cause.

Nausea and vomiting are not uncommon and many individuals may be slightly nauseated on waking in the morning. This is a symptom that must not be overlooked or passed off lightly. Too much alcohol will cause the condition, as well as a long standing, chronic, inflammatory state of the mucous membrane of the stomach itself. Diseases of the liver and gall bladder, tuberculosis, anemia and some other basic organic difficulties are associated with the symptom.

Food Sometimes Dispels Symptoms.

Other persons complain of pains in the late afternoon or just before dinner at night. When the stomach empties too rapidly or remains empty for too long a period hunger contractions occur, sometimes associated with pain. There is often a feeling of sinking, emptiness, or hollowness rather than pain. These pains when they occur may resemble those that accompany peptic ulcer. As a rule the symptoms are dispelled by taking some food, such as a glass of milk. Occasionally they come on because of the excessive use of tobacco, and many patients will be entirely relieved by cutting in half their daily tobacco consumption. If the pain does not vanish on taking food, investigation of the gall bladder and of the stomach itself must be made by means of a series of test meals and X-ray plates.

We must not forget the condition known as "nervous indigestion," which is often complained of by thin, undernourished people who are constipated and whose abdominal muscles are flabby. There are others who are not thin, but who have a sensitive, sympathetic nervous system that is responsible for intestinal contractions which start on the slightest provocation. Numerous cases have been cited, especially of young women, who are unable to participate in excitement or hilarity without vomiting or rumblings in the abdomen. At times the effect is that of active contraction of the intestine, or there is a definite spasm of the sphincters of the stomach, the rectum, and even the throat, tying up these orifices and preventing the normal passage of food or intestinal content. These symptoms may be so severe that they simulate bowel obstruction. All are relieved when the nervous symptoms pass away and digestive functions reassert themselves.

Diet Vital in Treatment.

The old expression "The food looks so good that my mouth actually waters" means that the sight and smell of food bring about an excessive secretion from the salivary glands, and it has long been known that the flow of gastric juice is greatly increased under such conditions. We may call this a psychic secretion, but it is a result of nervous influence stimulating the salivary and gastric glands.

Diet Is a Vital Factor in Treating Nervous Indigestion.

Conversely, in fright or embarrassment the mouth may become unusually dry.

The remedy for nervous indigestion is, of course, the relief of tension from whatever source it may arise, and diet is of first importance as soon as confidence between physician and patient has been established. One of the worst things that can be prescribed is a straight milk diet. Milk alone has a tendency to constipate and the residue in the intestine is entirely too bulky. The best type of diet is one that contains only a small amount of fiber, seeds, skins, or gristle.

We shall be glad to send suggestions for such a diet upon request accompanied by the usual stamped, addressed return envelope.

Today's Menus Feature Meat In Double Role

Soup Basis for Luncheon; It's Also Main Dish for Dinner.

By Dorothea Duncan.

A CRACKED BEEF bone and two pounds of beef brisket or plate can be the basis for an economical vegetable soup for luncheon and a meat dish for dinner.

After the stock is made, reserve the meat for dinner and continue preparing the soup by adding vegetables. The meat should be cooled and stored in the refrigerator until dinner time.

To prepare the soup meat for the dinner dish suggested in today's menus, cut it free from fat, gristle and bone and run it through the food chopper. Season the meat with salt and pepper to taste, add a little grated onion, some finely chopped green pepper, about one-third the quantity of fine, soft bread crumbs as meat and bind with beaten egg until the mixture is the same consistency as that of a meat loaf. Roll the meat mixture into flat, round cakes and dust them on either side with flour.

Heat some butter or bacon drippings in a skillet until hot but not smoking and lay the cakes in to brown on either side and heat through. Serve at once. Tomato sauce is an excellent accompaniment for this type of meat cake and can be served in place of the grilled tomatoes suggested on today's menu. Add another fresh vegetable in place of the tomatoes.

Forced Farm Labor May Be Latvian Plan

Riga, Latavia (AP).—School teachers in Latavia may be asked to spend their vacations pitching hay and candidates for government service may have to provide proof of service with plough, tractor and milking machine, says Janis Birznieks, minister of agriculture.

His plan would obviate the necessity, as was the case this summer, if importing 15,000 farm laborers, mostly Poles, to harvest crops.

Agricultural work, Minister Birznieks indicated in a radio address, may become obligatory for all unemployed or partly employed, possibly with attendance at universities and high schools dependent on willingness to spend some time in farm work.

Beer and Wine Revenue In California Increases

Sacramento, Calif. (U.P.).—Purchase of 7,298,882 gallons of beer and 1,325,234 gallons of wine in California during July netted the State $187,472 in taxes, according to a report of the State board of equalization.

Collections from the tax of 2 cents a gallon represented a substantial increase over the $163,920 for July, 1934, the board reported.

Only a small portion of the beer and wine sold in the State was imported, the board report revealed.

Dog's Exile Makes Street Safe for Mail Carriers

Santa Barbara, Calif. (AP). — It's safe now for postmen whose route takes them along Islay street here.

A Labrador retriever, described as a fine hunting and watch dog, had a special dislike of mail carriers. He bit two postmen and habitually made threatening gestures at a third. The municipal court ordered the dog exiled from the city.

Democratic Clubs Open Rally Friday

State Convention at Richmond to Draw Many Notables.

Attendance of 5,000 Is Expected at Session of Young Groups.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 10.—When the State convention of Virginia's Young Democratic Clubs formally convenes at the Mosque Auditorium here Friday afternoon, notables expected to be present will include, in addition to Gov. Peery and the entire Virginia congressional delegation, National President Frank Wickhem, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., honorary national president, and Founder Tyre Taylor, of Raleigh, N. C., and six State presidents.

John Curry, executive secretary, said he had been informed that the six visiting presidents who would be here include Mrs. Bessie Phoenix, of North Carolina; Lawrence B. Fenneman, of Maryland; J. Larus Hinson, of South Carolina; Raymond Walter, of the District of Columbia; H. L. Snyder, of Tennessee, and William F. Dorn, of Michigan.

Other Officials Accept.

Gov. Peery, Senators Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd and the nine Virginia Representatives, Lieut. Gov. James H. Price and other State officials have indicated they will attend.

Preceding the convention proper, the executive committee will meet Thursday afternoon, delegates will register from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. Friday in the John Marshall Hotel, and the committees on credentials, rules, permanent organization and constitution and by-laws will meet at 11 a. m.

A highlight is expected to be the address Saturday by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Roanoke, a leading New Deal member of the House. Convention officials expect 5,000 to attend.

John Galleher, State president, will convene the gathering at 2 p. m. Friday. Mayor J. Fulmer Bright of Richmond will welcome the convention and Mr. Galleher will respond.

Tuck to Speak.

After election of temporary officers, State Senator William M. Tuck, of Halifax, will deliver the keynote address.

Reports will be given at the business session and district meetings after adjournment will be addressed by the respective Representatives.

Entertainments will include a cabaret dance Friday night, a reception for the national officers and State presidents at the John Marshall roof garden from 6 to 7 o'clock Saturday, and a ball Saturday night.

Legion Aid Chief Plans 1935-36 Work

Virginia Women to Drive for Increased Membership.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 10.—The election of Miss Frances Beverley, of Winchester, as president of the Virginia American Legion Auxiliary, announced at the close of the convention held last week at Virginia Beach, marked the third time a Winchester woman has been so honored. This is the fifth time a Winchester citizen has headed the Virginia department of either the legion or the auxiliary.

Miss Beverley was preceded by two Winchester presidents, Mrs. W. A. Baker and Mrs. B. M. Roszel. Col. B. M. Roszel, of Robert Y. Conrad Post, served as commander of the Virginia department, as did Maj. Robert T. Barton.

Miss Beverley said today that she shortly would announce several appointments, including that of State secretary. One of the objectives of the auxiliary in the next year will be an increase in membership, she said.

Teachers in Virginia Pick Officers for Year

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 10.—At a meeting of the Fredericksburg Teachers Association yesterday, Miss Maxine Alverson was elected president to succeed Miss Louise Hendricks. Other officers named were Miss Claire Freeman, vice president, and Miss Marian Weedon, secretary and treasurer.

The following committees were elected for the year: Nominating committee, Mrs. Kate Keckler, Miss Dorothy Squires, Miss Mary Womack. Program committee, Miss Frances Harris, Miss Gladys Alrich and Mrs. Lorena Neill. Public relations committee, Miss Goldie Sager, Miss Mary Mapp and Guy H. Brown.

Corn Harvest Started In Eastern Panhandle

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 19.—Corn cutting in the Eastern Panhandle section is under way, although many farmers are waiting a week. A slightly below average yield is in prospect, County Agent W. N. McClung said.

The crop is exceedingly spotty. In some sections the fodder is long and the ears well filled. In others it will be little better than in the drought of 1930, when a bushel to the acre was harvested by some farmers.

'Strike' Continues in Fight To Prevent School Merger

Attorney Says Broad Run Will Raise Funds to Pay Teacher.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 10.—Patrons and pupils of the Broad Run School, closed this year by the board of education, are in the second week of their "strike," seeking to force school officials to appoint a teacher.

Patrick M. Schnauffer, attorney for the protesting patrons, declared today the patrons will get the services of a teacher and pay the teacher's salary by community solicitation rather than comply with the plan to send their children to the Middletown High School.

County School Superintendent Eugene W. Pruitt indicated there has been some weakening among some of the patrons. One mother, who signed the petition against closing has made application to have her children transported by bus Middletown, he said. He expressed a feeling of confidence that the community will become reconciled to the consolidation program.

County commissioners today denied statements that they were in sympathy with the strike. They intimated political influence.

One commissioner said much of the objection to sending children to Middletown lies in some ill feeling toward the bus driver, one of the trustees of the school and a relative of Leslie N. Coblentz, president of the school board, who is a relative of Emory L. Coblentz, former political leader of the county and head of the Central Trust Co., which closed in 1931.

The protesting patrons of the Broad Run School have been loud in their criticism of the school board, appointees of Emory L. Coblentz.

Fireman Is Injured In Virginia Tornado

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 10. (AP). Last discovered victim of tornadoes which dipped into Virginia Thursday is M. H. Carter, Norfolk & Western Railway fireman, who was blown from the locomotive cab of a freight train at Farmville. One arm was broken and a hip injured.

The twister blew the trainmen from the gangway across adjacent tracks. Engineer A. K. Loving, Conductor C. C. Lacks, and Flagman Melvin Carter and M. O. Padgett, who had gathered in the cab for a conference, were piled in a heap on the floor. The train was on a siding.

"It was just like an automobile running a thousand miles an hour," said Carter at his home here.

Coad Blames Statue Damage On Tourists

Indignant Over Charge St. Marys Townspeople Were the Vandals.

By the Associated Press.

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 10.—Senator J. Allan Coad expressed indignation today over an assumption that the "freedom of conscience statue was damaged by townspeopeople of St. Marys City.

He asserted he believed the vandals who broke off two fingers and smeared the statue with paint possibly were tourists, "thousands of whom visit the county every year."

"It is very likely that the two fingers were carried away by souvenir hunters," he said.

Coad's indignation was aroused over a letter carried by a Baltimore newspaper in which the writer laid the acts of depredations to St. Marys citizens.

"Every decent citizen of the county deplores the outrages," he said, "and I understand the county commissioners have offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the persons responsible.

"Nobody condones the acts.

"We have no police protection here. We never thought any necessary. It would not be practical to place a night watchman at the statue."

The statue was erected recently as a final event in the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the settlement of Maryland.

The Maryland Tercentenary Commission, of which Coad is a member, met several days ago in Annapolis to consider what steps it might take in regard to the vandalism.

Six Men to Face Court In Quarry Union Row

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 10.—Six Martinsburg quarrymen named in warrants issued Saturday by Justice C. W. Nicklin in alleged disturbances here last week, have posted bonds aggregating $10,000 for their appearance Thursday. Those named were Arlie Slonaker, Robert Quinn, Jacob Seal, C. N. Weakley, Seibert Lamb and Milton Miller.

Two warrants charge that they conspired to injure Douglas MacTavish, national organizer of quarry workers, and Frank Polocini, former quarry worker, in violation of the Redmen's act. Another warrant charged Quinn and Slonaker with a felonous attack upon MacTavish.

Coleman Case Writ Decision Is Due Shortly

High State Court to Act on Plea for Two Doomed in Slaying.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 10.—John Shell and Joe Jackson, colored, under sentence of death for the murder April 2 of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Coleman at their Spotsylvania home, will learn their fate within the next few days, following convening of the fall session of the Supreme Court of Appeals at Staunton today.

The Supreme Court will pass on a petition for a writ of error filed by E. A. Norrell, Richmond colored attorney, who obtained three reprieves from Gov. George C. Peery to permit him to make his plea. The date for execution is September 27.

Fourteen "assignments of error" are listed by Norrell in his petition filed with the Supreme Court.

In his motion for a new trial, Norrell sets forth 18 reasons.

Commonwealth's Attorney Emmett R. Carner, who prosecuted has filed an answer declaring it to be "more than 60 per cent grossly false and the other 40 per cent grossly exaggreated."

Lions Club Pushes Sewer Proposal

Frederick to Vote on Bonds September 24.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 10.—The Frederick Lions Club publicly was on record today in support of the proposed sewerage system for this city. The club said it would result in an outlay of $275,000 for labor alone "at a time when employment is greatly needed." It was indicated 400 men would be given jobs.

A special election has been called for September 24 at which voters will pass on a bond issue to finance part of the project.

The Lions Club, in its resolution, pointed out that an outright grant of 45 per cent of the total cost will be made by the Federal Government; it will reduce relief rolls; it is a necessary health measure and failure to take advantage of Federal co-operation at this time would "unquestionably" result in a $1,000,000 outlay by the citizens of the city "within the near future" for the sewerage system.

Signers of the petition were Charles F. Seeger, John W. Wolfe and Charles E. Hudson. It was approved by B. A. Winebrenner, the club's president.

Headed by Lieut. Col. Luis Alamillo, director of the Superior School of War of Mexico, the group came from Washington and proceeded at once to the administration building to present its compliments to Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the academy. Following the courtesy call, they made a tour of the institution, and later were luncheon guests of Admiral Sellers.

New Utility Offer.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 10 (AP).—H. W. Price, general manager of the Potomac Edison Co. branch here, again offered the city $6,000 to cover or remove street car rails in certain sections of the city. City Commissioner Harry Irvine said in his opinion $6,000 is not enough for the electric company to pay.

Expert Maps War to Halt Poultry Ills

Maryland Veterinarian Urges Owners to Guard Flocks.

Cites Importance of Protecting Four Million Maryland Fowls.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., Sept. 10.—Dr. Mark F. Welsh, State veterinarian, advised State poultrymen tonight to seek additional State funds for control of poultry diseases constituting a potential threat to approximately 4,000,000 Maryland chickens.

Addressing a meeting of Kent County poultrymen here, Dr. Welsh pointed out that producers are paying taxes on their property and equipment valued altogether at about $75,000,000.

Much of the work now being carried on by the livestock sanitary commission, of which he is head, is now concerned with diseases of cattle and horses, Dr. Welsh said, but every effort is being made to keep poultry disease inspection work "up to par" on funds now available.

Flocks Lag.

Maryland flocks have lagged behind those in many other States, notably Massachusetts, Dr. Welsh asserted, largely because of the fact so few Maryland flocks can be certified as free of disease.

Three full-time poultry veterinarians are operating under the commission now, he said, but their services are taxed to the utmost inasmuch as the inspection period lasts but four months in each year.

Under present conditions, the inspection work must be financed largely by the individual producers, Dr. Welsh said.

"The poultry industry is well organized," he told the farmers, "and should be able to secure assistance in proportion to the taxes paid by the producers to the State. That is the way the cattle owners obtain inspection funds from the Legislature."

Dual On Cattle.

The commission's largest program now is concerned with the eradication of bovine tuberculosis, he said. Herds are tested free and diseased animals are removed and sold for slaughter. The State pays one-third of the owner's loss, the Federal Government one-third, and the owner one-third.

This indemnity costs the State on an average of $17 per head, he said.

When herds are cleared of infection, they are given an accredited rating, with the owner responsible for keeping his cattle clean of disease. When infection in a county is reduced to ½ of 1 per cent or less, the county is placed on the accredited list.

Work Halted.

Thereafter, work in that area is halted by the commission for a period of three years, after which a sample is taken of 10 per cent of county cattle to determine if the herds still are clean of disease.

He pointed out that State would not be justified in conducting disease control work over a period of years unless it had hope of eventually eradicating infection. The best means of control, he emphasized, is the employment of sanitary practices by all producers of stock.

Virginia WPA Cost Put at 40 Million

Estimate for State Boosted by $5,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 10.—Virginia WPA Director W. A. Smith today estimated the total to be made available for works progress administration projects in Virginia may reach $40,000,000.

He had figured a probable total of $35,000,000, and on the basis of a further tally said he believed it probably would go $5,000,000 higher.

Meanwhile the WPA office is working night and day in an effort to get all applications to Washington by Thursday.

Martinsburg Church Plans Organ Recital

The organ will be played at services for the first time on the morning of September 22 by Mrs. Elizabeth Morison Small. The Rev. Henry H. Sweet, D.D., moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, Southern branch, will deliver the sermon.

Leinbach is to be the principal speaker. Another important speaker will be Dr. Ross W. Sanderson, executive secretary of the Maryland-Delaware Council of Religious Education.

State Police Call Rumored In Clam War

Officers Won't Talk on Report of Expedition to Snow Hill.

14 Diggers Appeal Fines After Mob of 300 Wins Release.

By the Associated Press.

Snow Hill, Md., Sept. 10.—Worcester County clam diggers carried their fight against the new $5 clam license fee to the Worcester County Circuit Court today as the latest step in a drawn-out, bitterly contested struggle.

Fourteen appeals from a magistrate's decision fining diggers $25 and costs each were filed today.

The appeals were instituted as reports were current in all sections of the State that Maryland State police had been ordered to report to Snow Hill for emergency duty. State police in Baltimore declined to comment and commanding officers of the force were reported to be on the Eastern Shore somewhere.

Violence Threatened.

The struggle came near to reaching violence last Sunday night when a mob of more than 300 persons gathered outside the jail here and demanded the release of three clammers jailed for failure to pay fines imposed by Magistrate W. W. Price.

Sheriff Ernest C. West at first refused demands of the mob that the prisoners be released and sent in a call for State police and other officers. Later, however, after hearing other demands from the mob and conferring with State's Attorney Thomas F. Johnson, Sheriff West released the men.

All of the 14 men were tried here August 24 before Magistrate Price, each entered a plea of guilty and each was fined $25 and costs. Their attorney, W. G. Kerbin, jr., asked for a respite for payment of the fines pending a conference with Judge Robert F. Duer, chairman of the State conservation commission.

The clammers then were summoned to reappear September 3 and pay their fines or appeal.

May Pay in Installments.

A second postponement was granted by Magistrate Price when it was felt an opinion of the attorney general would be necessary before further steps could be taken. Last Saturday night was the deadline set by the magistrate, but no clammers appeared to pay their fines or appeal.

Sheriff West went out after the men Sunday and arrested three of them. The mob soon gathered at the jail.

The cases will be heard at the October term of circuit court. All the men were released on their own recognizance pending the appeal, though none actually appeared with the attorney.

State's Attorney Thomas F. Johnson plans to consult with Gov. Nice as to details of a license installment payment plan. The Governor has suggested that way out of the difficulty, but nothing can be done along those lines until an opinion is received from the attorney general as to the legality of such procedure.

Warren County Gets PWA Aid For 2 Schools

Board Decides Against Plan to Erect Structures Independently.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., Sept. 10.—After advertising for bids for the construction of new school buildings in Front Royal and Riverton, both under the Public Works Administration and under its own management, the Warren County school board has decided to erect the buildings as PWA projects.

The contract for the Riverton, four-room elementary building, has been awarded to C. E. Nuckols & Co. of Richmond as low bidder under the PWA program at a cost of $20,600, of which the Federal Government will make a 30 per cent grant. The county will save $4,000.

Changes were made recently in the plans for the Front Royal eight-room primary building. The board will advertise for new bids under the PWA. It is estimated that this building will cost approximately $40,000.

The Virginia Public Works Administration has approved two projects for Front Royal under the new PWA which carries a 45 per cent Federal grant.

One will provide additional filters and water line extension for the town at a cost of $27,100, including a Federal grant of $12,195. A second project will extend sewers throughout the town and provide for the construction of a modern disposal plant. The amount of this project is $51,450, of which $23,150 will be a 45 per cent Federal grant.

A project for a $31,000 school building at Sperryville, Rappahannock County, also has been approved.

Head-on Crash Of 2 Freights Injures 4 Men

28 Cars Strewn on Tracks of C. & O. Railroad Near Warren, Va.

By the Associated Press.

Warren, Va., Sept. 10.—Four trainmen were injured and 28 freight cars derailed here today in a head-on collision between two freight trains on the James River division of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad.

The injured, none seriously hurt, were:

Russell M. Bagby, 42, a fireman, of Richmond.

P. A. Taylor, engineer, of Richmond.

M. S. Angle, brakeman, of Richmond.

C. R. Norment, a fireman, of Peakes, Va.

C. & O. employes said that the trains which collided were an eastbound freight, termed "second 78," and a westbound extra freight, No. 1246, headed from Richmond to Lynchburg.

The 28 wrecked cars were strewn over the right-of-way. One was thrown almost on top of the station here.

The James River line, used almost exclusively for freight, was blocked last week by flood waters of the river.

White Residence Is Swept by Fire

Firemen, Estate Employes Fail to Check Blaze.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., Sept. 10.—Fire of undetermined origin early today swept through Chilton, the palatial gray-stone country home of Arthur White, destroying the servants' quarters and damaging thousands of dollars worth of valuable antique furnishings.

Fire companies from Leesburg, Warrenton and Winchester arrived too late to check the flames in the upper stories of the house. Firemen had been summoned shortly after 4 a. m. when the household was aroused by a governess. She had been awakened by a fire alarm.

Before the arrival of the fire companies, a bucket brigade of employes of the estate and neighbors made futile efforts to check the fire. The family fled from the home in their nightclothes.

Kent Kidnap Case Put Off In Virginia

Fight on Death Sentence for Delp in Police Killing Postponed, Too.

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., Sept. 10.—The Virginia Supreme Court today ordered continued until the November term a hearing on the appeal of Maj. Robert C. Kent, jr., thereby prolonging the finish to the case which has had many strange turns since Kent was convicted in Botetourt Circuit Court of kidnaping Mrs. Mary Jane Hastings and sentenced to 30 years in prison.

The high court also postponed until the November term in Richmond hearing of an appeal of Howard Delp, sentenced to the electric chair in the slaying of Chief Posey Martin in a jailbreak at Galax.

In requesting the continuances, Attorney General A. P. Staples declared both men are under mental observation at the Southwestern State Hospital in Marion.

Edward T. Haynes, attorney for Kent, protested the continuance, declaring his client was ready to go ahead with his appeal. His protests were overruled.

The Governor's board on mental hygiene recently examined Kent, who was accused of kidnaping Mrs. Hastings, Blue Ridge Springs hotel operator, and reported he was suffering from a form of temporary, but recurring, insanity. Kent promptly challenged this report, declaring the Botetourt Court had found him sane. He demanded an early hearing on the writ of error granted him by the supreme court.

Mrs. Hastings' body was found near Stroudsburg, Pa., several days after she and Kent had motored from Blue Ridge Springs to Washington.

About 30 cases were on the docket when court convened with all justices present for the opening of the Staunton term today.

Heart Attack Kills Broker; Auto Hits Pole

W. T. Reed, Virginian, Is Declared Dead Before Car Ran Wild.

Stricken with a heart attack as he drove his automobile in the 1700 block of Eighteenth street northwest, William T. Reed, 73, representative of the New York brokerage firm of R. C. Williams, died instantly late yesterday.

Out of control, his automobile jumped the curb and crashed into a pole. An Emergency Hospital ambulance screamed through a collecting crowd of bystanders and rushed Reed to the hospital, where physicians said his death occurred before his automobile ran wild.

A native of Herndon, Va., Reed had lived in Washington most of his life, making his home at 2608 Cathedral avenue. Yesterday he appeared at his office as usual.

He was a thirty-second degree Mason and active in fraternal and social circles.

Surviving Reed are his wife, Mrs. Leonore Reed, and one son, William T. Reed, jr. Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night.

British amateur, 6 and 4, in another upset.

The last of John Bull's threats passed out when Tony Torrance, the handsome English dentist and star of the British Walker Cup team, bowed gracefully and unexpectedly to an unknown, Bill Holt, of Syracuse, on the twentieth hole in a soul-stirring clash.

Bobby Riegel, 19-year-old Richmond star, holder of the Southern championship; T. M. Bloch, an unknown from Wheeling, and J. C. Benson, of Pittsburgh, another little-known golfer, effected the defeats of favored players.

Riegel defeated Gene Homans, of Englewood, N. J., finalist in the 1930 national amateur, 3 and 1; Block conquered Leland Hamman, of Paris, Tex., former trans-Mississippi champion, 1 up, and Benson turned back Don Armstrong, the Chicago whisky salesman, 1934 amateur semifinalist, 5 and 3, after shooting the 15 holes in two under par.

Excitement Runs Rife.

Aside from the copious upsets, there were plenty of exciting matches in which national stars were featured.

The most amazing comeback of the day was staged by sandy-haired, drawling Charlie Yates, of Atlanta, Bob Jones' home town. Charlie, who won the intercollegiate crown on this beautiful course in 1934, was forced to put on a big rally before winning yesterday and he was called on for an even greater spurt today. He was 4 down and 8 to go, this Yates, to a fellow named Michael Parco, of Buffalo, and the outlook was gloomy.

Parco had fired an even par 36 at Yates, had won the tenth to go 4 up, and was all set to rout the Atlantan when who should appear on the eleventh tee but Bob Jones in the flesh.

Bob said, "What'sa matter, Charles?" And Charles answered, "I'm gonna get goin' right now."

"Go to it, son," Bob said, "with my compliments."

The Georgia Cracker tossed seven straight pars at the Buffalo lad, won seven straight holes, and smoked him out, 3 and 1 on the seventeenth green.

That grand old man from Oregon, H. Chandler Egan, 1904-05 amateur champion, engaged in the longest match of the day. The Medford peach grower, proving that he was still in form, eliminated Charlie Becka, of Chicago, on the twenty-second hole after both golfers had leveled par for the eighteen holes with 72s.

Somerville Victor.

Ross (Sandy) Somerville, 1932 champion, one of three Canadian stars left in the fight, and Charlie (Chuck) Kocsis, of Detroit, shot some of the most sensational golf of the day. The allround athlete from the land of the Maple Leaf was 3 under par for fourteen holes in trimming Doug Hill, of Cincinnati, 6 and 4. Kocsis, winner of the medal in the 1934 intercollegiates here, was 2 under in crushing Col-

NewsomBlanks Tigers With Six Hits

Pitches Nats to Victory, 6-0, as Rowe Yields Early Lead.

Bolton and Newsom contributed singles that scored Kress. Kuhel doubled down the first-base line to score Bolton.

It was 4-0 after the Nats had finished with Rowe in the third. Myer led off with a single off Rowe's bare hand, and with two out, Powell scored Myer with a single to center. After stealing second Powell scored on Kress' single to left.

The Nats found Sorrell pitching against 'em in the sixth and Johnny Stone saluted him with the hardest wallop of the game, a line drive that landed high against the scoreboard for a triple. Myer drew a walk, Travis beat out a hit to Greenberg to score Stone and Estallella's fly to Goslin scored Myer from third after he had stolen the base.

All of this time, the Tigers were finding Newsom a puzzle. In no inning did they get more than one hit and in only one did more than one Tiger reach base. That kind of pitching ruined their chances no less than eating ruins the appetite.

Root Allows Only 6 Hits In Victory

Takes 13th of Season; Chicagoans Ring Up 7th Straight.

Fred Lindstrom Leads Attack With Double and Single.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Chicago continued to get good pitching today and breezed through to a 4-to-0 victory over Boston as Charley Root pitched a 6-hit shutout. It was the Cubs' seventh straight triumph and their eighteenth in 21 games with the Braves this season. The Cubs, however, failed to gain in the National League race as the St. Louis Cardinals also won.

Root allowed only one runner past first base and none past second, as he turned in his season's thirteenth victory. Meanwhile, his mates got to Ben Cantwell for 10 hits, with Fred Lindstrom leading the attack with a double and single.

Lindstrom scored the first run and drove in two of the others. The Cubs bunched three hits with a wild throw by Urbanski, the only error of the game, for 3 runs in the fifth.

Browns Win, 8 to 7, Sweep A's Series

Errors Cost Macks, Beaten 13th Straight Time.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—The St. Louis Browns made a clean sweep of the four-game series with the Athletics by winning the final contest today, 8 to 6.

The defeat was the thirteenth straight for the Mackmen. The Athletics tied the score at 6-6 by scoring six runs in the third inning. They were stopped by Russ Van Atta's relief pitching and lost when errors by Johnson and Finney helped the Browns to two runs in the sixth inning.

'Bucky' Bowler Under Knife for Appendicitis

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 10.—Ellison "Bucky" Bowler, former Fredericksburg High School football star and candidate for the Randolph-Macon College team, was rushed here from Ashland, site of the college, last night and underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis at Mary Washington Hospital. His condition tonight was reported as satifactory.

Bowler entered Randolph-Macon this fall and had been in Ashland for a week for early football training. He was regarded as a likely candidate for the center position, but is now definitely lost to the team this season. While in high school he won places for three years on all the northern Virginia high squad.

Rally by Cards In 8th Trims Phils, 4-2

Bowman Blows Up After Huring One-Hit Ball; 2,000 Look On.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 10.—A three-run rally n the eighth inning, after Joe Bowman had held them to one hit and one run, gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 4-to-2 victory today over Philadelphia.

The victory, coming after two straight defeats at the hands of the Phils, enabled the Red Birds to maintain their one-game National League lead over the Chicago Cubs, who won again from Boston. The New York Giants, beating Pittsburgh twice, closed in their third-place margin to 2½ games.

Manager Frank Frisch, with a single in the sixth inning, was the only member f ohis team to find safe territory until the decisive eighth. His ace was a timely hit, scoring Bill Hallahan. The pitcher had walked, gone to second on Martin's walk and to third on Rothrock's forceout of Martin.

Issues Six Walks.

Bowman issued six passes, but he was just wild enough to be good until the eighth. Ge$lbert, the man who came back with a vengeance, led off the inning with a single. Pinch Hitter Virgil Davis followed suit and then came important doubles, by Rothrock and Medwick. It was the twenty-seventh consecutive game in which Medwick had hit safely.

Curt Davis stopped the rally, but the Phils threw a scare into the Cards before the game ended. Dizzy Dean went to the hill in the ninth and the Phils put two men on base before Dean could retire the side.

For the second day in succession, about 2,000 fans turned out to see the league-leaders.

Grant Beats Budge in 4 Sets For Upset in National Tennis

Wilmer Allison, of Texas, in the championship round on Thursday.

The women's final also will be decided tomorrow, with Helen Jacobs, gunning for her fourth straight title, playing Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, the same opponent she licked in straight sets last year.

The 18 games played by Grant and Budge today were filled with tennis of the highest order. The Californian was very much on top of his game and brought out every shot he had in his racquet in an effort to check the rampaging Grant. He mixed speed with delicacy, floating lobs with whistling drives, deep corner shots with gentle, teasing drops. He tried the baseline and the forecourt, but it availed him nothing. He simply couldn't put the ball where the little Georgian couldn't scramble and slide to get his racquet on it.

Only once did Budge break through Grant's stout defenses. That was in the third set, when Grant, leading 5—4, 15—0, was in 3 points of a straight set win. Desperate, Budge raised his game to amazing heights to sweep that game, and the next two with the loss of but 1 point.

Budge Falters in Pace.

Had he been able to hold his game at the blistering pace Grant, or any other player in the world, for that matter, would have been handcuffed. But he couldn't, and the Atlantan, beginning with the fourth set, began coming on again. He broke the Californian's service in the opening game of the final chapter, using a pair of lovely lobs as his weapons. Budge nullified this gain quickly, however, breaking Grant at love in the second, and then holding his own for a 2-1 lead. Bitsy leveled at 2-all and then both held their deliveries to make it 3-all.

Budge's hopes ended there. Grant, working like a demon now, cracked the redhead's service for the second time in the long seventh game. Twice in this game he went yards outside the playing field to whip back winners.

He held his own in the eighth to take a 5-3 lead and then, with the crowd yelling madly, again broke the Californian's stinging service for game, set and match.

Grant's win over Budge would not have come as such a shock to the customers had they taken the trouble to read the tennis history of the past two years, for it is studded with Grant's victories over the top-ranking performers of the country. At one time or another in the past two years, Grant has whipped them all—Allison, Shields, Wood, Stoefen, Lott, Parker and the rest. Only a few weeks ago he romped to a 4-set win over Roderick Menzel, the giant Czech Davis Cup player, who ranks in the world's "big ten."

Yanks Win 5th In Row, Beat Tribe, 4-1

Tamulis Shows Old Form, Granting Only 6 Hits; Brown Victim.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Vito Tamulis flashed some of his early season form today as he held the Cleveland Indians to six hits while the New York Yankees were bunching their blows off Clint Brown for a 4-to-1 victory. The triumph ran the Yanks' winning streak to five straight, four at the expense of the Indians.

A pair of errors by Ralph Winegarner, relief pitcher who was subbing for Hal Trosky at first base, helped the Yankees to two of their runs. The others came in the fifth when, with Ryan and Tamulis on base, Ben Chapman came through with a two-base blow.

The Indians made four of their six hits in the first three innings, scoring their only run in the third, and were held to two safe blows the remainder of the contest. Knickerbocker's single, followed by Averill's double and Vosmik's fly, accounted for Cleveland's run.

Pirrone, Overlin Will Battle Here

Paul Pirrone, leading middleweight contender, and Kem Overlin, of Norfolk, have been matched for a 10-round bout at Griffith Stadium next Monday, it was announced by Promoter Joe Turner yesterday. The contest between the two leading 165-pounders was arranged as a substitute for the abandoned Marty Gallagher-King Levinsky match.

Pirrone was signed for the match several days ago, but Overlin's manager, Chris Dundee, balked at the terms offered, forcing the promoters to raise the ante several times.

Says Amateur Is Not Dressy; Tries Evil Eye

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 10.—If you were to be walking cross-country in these parts and should stumble suddenly onto this magnificently groomed and picturesque golf layout, you would, with difficulty, be persuaded that the Amateur Golf Championship of America was being played in, around and over it. If anything, it resembles a Monday morning at your country clu, when the sons of the members are allowed to play. You have never in your life seen so many apple-cheeked, slick-haired youngsters gathered together in national competition.

Occasionally you see a middle-aged gentleman wandering solemnly down the fairways, swinging a golf club, but most of the competitors still have fuzz on their cheeks.

The Amateur is always my favorite tournament, and one reason is that it is the least dressy of all the golf matches. The uniform of the day, almost de rigeur, is a pair of baggy pants and a sweat shirt. And not one of those fuzzy, colored sweat shirts with zipper and collar, either, but the plain T-shirt. If there is a crease in the pants it is ten to one that the guy is a show-off. Now, the kids don't go in for dress. What they seem to want is comfort and golf.

Is a Great Relief.

This comes as a great delief after you have attended some of the peacock affairs where the golfers change twice a day and come out wearing cream-colored knickers, pastel socks, two-tone ties and handkerchiefs to match. Mr. Lawson Little appeared in knickerbockers, but made up for it by wearing the same old faded blue sweater he has been using for years.

They make a great picture, these kids—shy, quiet, clean, well-behaved, all of them with beautiful swings and perfect manners, walking the course, two by two. There won't be many left after tomorrow because the oldsters with tournament experience eventually put them out, though not always. Lawson Little had a narrow escape yesterday from a child named Rufus King, jr., whose father is a trap-shooting champion, and who himself is or was junior national trap-shooting champion. He went wild as these youngsters did and scored three or four birdies in a row and had the champion well down on the first nine. Little finally pulled out, but said it was the toughest match he had ever had. Polite as these kids are, they have no respect for champions.

Tries Evil Eye.

I have been experimenting somewhat with the evil eye here, and I find it inefficient, and practically valueless.

Charley Yates was playing a dark-haired youngster from Buffalo this morning, name of Mike Parco. It did not seem to me that Mr. Parco was going to go very far in the tourney, anyway, so I thought that it would be not too much of an imposition to try out my evil eye on him, especially as I am interested somewhat in rooting Mr. Yates home. Mind you, I work my eye strictly by remote control. I do not annoy the golfers by going close and coughing, or rattling papers, but prefer to slink along in the woods, bordering the course, mumbling to myself. If an evil eye is any good at all, you ought to be able to throw it at least 20 or 30 yards.

ANYWAY I put it on Parco at the first tee, and he hit his drive right down the mdidle, stuck his second on the edge of the green and sank an 18-foot putt for a birdie 3. Yates took a par. However it takes you some time to heat up the eye, so I wasn't worrying. On the next hole Parco got home in 2 (it was a par 5) and down in 2. Yates took a 5 and was 2 down. They halved the next hole. Obviously it was beginning to work.

Thirty-Foot Putt.

On the next Parco put his second shot up to the top of the green and sank a 30-footer for his third birdie, and my man was 3 down. I will confess that I was pretty badly rattled. I don't like to do this as a rule, preferring to save it as a last resort, but I added the Gypsy curse to the eye on the next hole. Parco

Louis Ready for Baer Battle, Turns to Rooting Tigers Home

By the Associated Press.

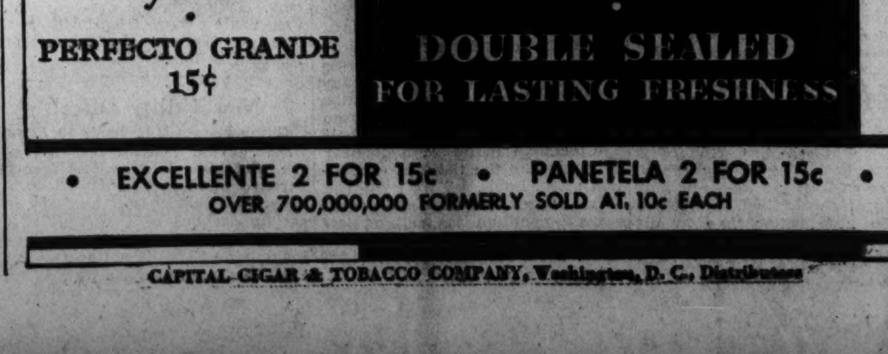

COMPTON LAKES, N. J., Sept. 10.—Ready now to fight Max Baer in the Yankee Stadium, though the engagement doesn't take place until September 24, Joe Louis, Detroit's Negro sensation, has just about given up fight preparations for the more-pressing duty of rooting home Mickey Cochrane's Detroit Tigers.

"They're just about in, I guess," he decided today after a short workout devoted only to limbering-up exercises. "But I'm going to see them play the Yankees Thursday in New York. I think the Cubs will be the team they'll have to lick in the world series."

The dead-pan mask the 21-year-old Negro wore when he first came to town to flatten Primo Carnera is fast slipping away as Louis prepares easily for the most important battle of his career. He's in perfect condition. In fact, he's never out of perfect candition. He weighs 198 pounds today, just what he scaled when he knocked out Kingfish Levinsky in one round in Chicago. His muscles are bulging and loose, his big chocolate body trim. He punches accurately, fiercely, and no matter how long nor how hard he works he never draws a hurried breath.

Louis doesn't know how to worry, but he is learning how to talk to

Favored Richstrike Leads All Way to Score at Narragansett

2-Year-Old Is 3-Length Winner

Armful in Second Place; Daily Double Returns $44.70 Mutuel.

By the Associated Press.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 10.—Leading all the way through the 5½ furlongs of the fourth, feature race here today, T. F. Swords' 2-year-old gelding, Richstrike, won by three lengths from Mrs. W. H. Cane's Armful over aheavy but drying track.

Accounting for the fifth victory of his career, the juvenile son of War Cry stretched out in front of Houghton P. Metcalf's Argoan down the back stretch. The latter tired badly rounding the turn, and yielded his position to H. Neusteter's Masked Gal, which came fast on the outside from the half-mile pole.

As they rounded for home, Jockey Ira Hanford kept Armful on the rail and managed to take over second place with a fast finish which Masked Gal could not equal.

Rickstrike Pays $4.50.

The latter was three lengths back of Armful, but two and a half lengths in front of R. W. Pearce's Mate Tea. Richstrike was the favorite and paid $4.50, $2.70 and $2.30. Armful was the second choice and Masked Gal the third choice and their prices were correspondingly low.

The Lord Nelson, a 6-furlong sprint for 3-year-olds and upward, was won by Mrs. F. Williams' General A.

The daily double price today was $44.70, there being 374 tickets sold on the combination of Admiral C. T. Grayson's Over Yonder, winner of the first, and Mrs. I. T. Young's Hidden Dust, winner of the third.

FESTOON, under urging early to hold to a prominent position, swung to the outside in the stretch, closed gamely and barely managed to be up in time. WISE KING showed speed from the start, fought it out with good energy and just failed to last. BOB'S BOY, outrun early, moved up steadily in the last five-sixteenths, though never able to threaten the leaders. SANTA ANITA, placed well and under pressure leaving the back stretch, was never a factor. BLIND TALK had speed for the first three furlongs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIDDEN DUST, $12.80, $4.40, $3.50; ANTARCTIC, $3.70, $3.20; WALDA, $9.30.

HIDDEN DUST was steadied along in back of the pace, moved through on the inside at the stretch turn and, wearing down the leaders, outgamed ANTARCTIC at the end. The latter drew away into a good lead, was steadied along in front, but weakened through the last furlong. WALDA raced prominently placed all the way though unable to improve her position in the drive. HELIOS raced evenly. LIBERTY OAK never could gain a prominent position.

RICH STRIKE stepped into the command at once, drew into a good lead leaving the back stretch and, rated along under steadying restraint, won with speed in reserve. ARMFUL, pinched back at the far turn, recovered gamely and closed with good energy. MATETEA never could reach the leaders. ARGOAN had early speed, but faltered through the closing quarter-mile. PROF. PAUL, a trailer early, came willingly.

GENERAL A., away well and under slight reserve early, went to the front leaving the back stretch, drew into a good lead and was never threatened. ACAUTAW, away well, dropped back in the first quarter, moved around on the outside, ducked to the inside at the stretch turn and closed stoutly. MOANE KEALA, unruly at the post, was started outside the stalls, came to the outside and closed considerable ground in the last quarter-mile. AUNT FLOR, in hand while following the leader, was unable to improve her position.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:21. Off at 5:23½. The latter moved around on the outside leaving the back stretch and closed with good energy in the stretch run. CHATTERFOL, under slight reserve early, came on the inside, showed in front briefly in the stretch, but was unable to maintain his advantage. BLIND BROOK, under stout restraint while racing with the winner, assumed a brief lead, lost command only to regain it midway of the turn, but weakened in the last threee-sixteenths.

Seven Gridmen Lost to Navy This Year

Coaches Are Faced With Problem of Molding Untried Talent.

(Another in a series dealing with prospects of leading college football teams.)

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 10.—Like the "Q" ships of the wartime fleet, the Naval Academy's football team this fall will be a mystery eleven. Its strength and deception will be unknown until tested on the anvil of competition.

Upon the ability of 1934 substitutes and stalwart sophomores will depend whether the Navy blue and gold will continue to fly victoriously.

Seven members of the team and 15 of the varsity squad were graduated. Gone are such bulwarks as Dick Burns, guard; Slade Cutter and George Lambert, tackles, and Bob Dornin and Bob Mandelkorn, clever ends. The back field took a 'terrific jolt in the graduation of Buzz Borries, all-American half back, and Bill Clark, full back and ace punter.

Lost Only One Game.

It was with these men that Lieut. Thomas J. Hamilton, 29-year-old head coach in his first year at the Academy welded together an outfit that laid low all foes save the Pittsburgh Powerhouse. Largely from untried talent, he is trying to assemble another such machine.

He shouldn't have much trouble with the middle of the line. For Capt. Louis B. Robertshaw will take over the center post and good guards should come from among David Zabriskie, Otis Cole, Rivers Morrell and Ray Vogel—all participants in last year's 3-to-0 triumph over Army.

The tackles and ends, however, promise to take a deal of discovering, although Richard S. Bull, jr., who played against Army and can fill Cutter's place as a field goal cutter, is a promising candidate for left wing.

Backfield Candidates.

Chief among the backfield candidates are John Schmidt, Newell Thomas, Tom Edwards and Joseph Evans, who was Clark's understudy.

Navy will continue the style of attack so effectively inaugurated last year. This includes a combination of short punt formation wit ha jump shift to close formation, plays breaking from a single wing, right or left.

The schedule.

September 28—William and Mary. October 5, Mercer; 10 (Thursday), Virginia; 19, Yale at New Haven; 26, Notre Dame at Baltimore. November 2—Princeton at Princeton; 9, Penn at Philadelphia; 16, Columbia; 30, Army at Philadelphia.

Pixlee Aids Work While Squad Idle

G. W. Coaches Dig Ditches After Heavy Rain.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Camp Letts, Md., Sept. 10.—Jim Pixlee, head coach of George Washington University's football squad, and two assistants, Len Walsh and Bill Reinhart, turned to ditch-digging yesterday afternoon and in return for their labors received a cold supper.

Last week Pixlee, using a plow hitched to a team of mules, furrowed a make-shift drainage system across the field to accelerate the disposal of rainwater and thus speed up practice. It was a good scheme, but today "Possum Jim" decided to refill the furrows for the sake of a smoother field. He did and regretted.

The worst rainstorm teh squad has experienced thus far broke late in the afternoon, completely flooding the field and bringing Pixlee and his aids into action with their spades openng up drain channels.

RUSS COLEMAN,

rangy tackle, who has set at rest one of Coach Bill Raftery's worries with respect to the Virginia Military Institute line this season. The Flying Cadets are now in their second week of pre-season practice at Lexington.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Narragansett Park, Sept. 10.

Dear Al:

I received a letter the other day from one of the Benningites putting me on the pan for mentioning Clocker Mike's meals. "Why don't you stick to something more serious?" the letter asked. All I can say is that Mike's meals are as serious a question as I can think of at the moment. I confess I like to keep Mike a trifle hungry now and then for he does his best work when he realizes that he must eat regularly. In fact, I was pleased when I received a wire from him today, even if it did come collect. It was from Havre de Grace and read: "Do I eat the rest of the week or do I have to wait until I see you Friday night?" The wire proved that Mike is on the job at the Maryland track, and the fact that he is worried about food tells me that he must be hanging around the track where he has a limited amount of credit at the track kitchen. Of course, it is possible that Mike is a very well-fed person at the moment. In that event, he would want money because there is one of those claw machines over in the adjacent town. Sometimes I don't know my horses, but I certainly know my Mike. And I know that eating is a mighty serious proposition with him—most of the time. BILL.

First race—Bullfinch, is a son of the mud-running Toro, and has a victory to his credit over such as these. Gets in with 108 pounds and looks like the winner. Harlem Belle has speed and looms as a keen factor here. Golden Key for the show award.

Second race—Light Brook seems well placed in this field. Rosen will do the riding and I see no reason for mistakes. Fair Countess can better those recent races. Transprent threw us down last out, but has a chance.

Third race—Alwintour will find a track that suits and a field that is only fair. The combination should make this one the winner. Flag Bearer and Rhodius to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Little Nymph seems to be a fair sort of juvenile. Has good races and excellent trials and deserves a top rating. The Headley Entry of Tinkling Brook and Hollyrood should be in the thick of the money battle. Bay Buddy is a possible surprise.

Fifth race—Technique and Our Mae, teamed as the Creech entry, are both capable performers in the going. Patchpocket looms as the most dangerous of the others. Indiantown favors the off track and may be prominent.

Sixth race—Safe and Sound is assigned top weight here. Breaks off the rail and may make every post a winning one. Chatmoss wins on muddy tracks and should go well. Don Guzman for the rest.

Seventh race—Hokuao gets in with 110 pounds, thanks to the apprentice allowance, and will be prominent here. I'm going to string along. Postscript and Kieva for the place and show.

Eighth race—Shot and Shell, Believer and Sun Clothing is the way I prefer them in the finale. Sun Clothing has been quietly awaiting the signal and is due to awake soon. The same goes for Glendye.

Little Wins Again After Lain Leads

well Troy, of New York, 7 and 5. Kocsis finished with three birdies.

In one of the day's feature matches, Johnny Gorman, poker-faced Omaha bomber and winner of the 1933 Open title, eliminated mustachioed Georgie Dunlap, 1933 amateur king, 3 and 2. Goodman shot a 36 to take a 3-up lead on Dunlap at the turn. Both were shaky on the back nine, with Goodman's magic touch with the putter steering him to victory.

Approach Wins.

A deadly approach ending up 3 feet from the nineteenth hole enabled Rodney Bliss, of Omaha, to defeat Horace Williams, of St. Petersburg, Fla., and a brilliant birdie 3 on the home hole gave Gus Moreland, Walker Cup star, a 1-up victory over Johnny Lehman, sturdy Chicago golfer.

Max Marston, Philadelphia gentleman-farmer and 1923 champion, was defated by the Canadian, John Nash, 6 and 4. Al Anderegon, of Chicago, who eliminated Johnny Fischer at Brookline last year, lost on the twentieth hole to Oliver Transue, hometown boy.

Your little "Cinderella Kid," Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, played even par golf to trim Russ Martin, of Chicago, 5 and 4.

Two under par, out in 34, Tommy Goodwin, of New York, eliminated Wilson Marks, of Pittsburgh, 5 and 4, and Reynolds ("Extra Hole") Smith, of Dallas, won handily from Glenn Bishop, of Toledo.

Dave Goldman, Texas steel lathe worker and runner-up to Little last season, stepped on the gas in the stretch to defeat 19-year-old Crawford Rainwater, of Atlanta, 3 and 2. Goldman was one under par for the sixteen holes.

Victory also rested with two former Washington golf stars, George Voigt and Maurice McCarthy, the former of New York and the latter now a Cleveland boy. Voigt defeated Johnny Diggs, of Raleigh, N. C., 3 and 2, and McCarthy played near-par golf to conquer Warren Colton, of Minneapolis.

College Star Wins.

Ed White, of Texas, intercollegiate champion, was 1 over par in defeating Hunt E. Hick, of Chicago, 4 and 3, and looked impressive in his debut.

Some hot matches are on tap tomorrow. Champion Little faces Knox Young, of Pittsburgh, and should win easily. Walter Emery opposes Ross Somerville in the first-quarter feature and Ray Billows and Fred Haas, two kids, promise to feature the show in the second quarter.

Two matches are scheduled tomorrow, reducing the field to 16 by tomorow night.

Somerville, Yates, Goodman and Little loo mas semifinalists.

But Old Man Upset always must be reckoned with in a tournament of this type.

Joe Louis Cheers On Detroit Tigers

reporters without pulling into a shell; to meet the crowds that come to his camp to watch him and demand autographs; to laugh and smile once in a while. He is absolutely unconcerned about the threat of Max Baer.

"I'll fight him like I've fought everyone," he said casually as he strolled about his training quarters. "From what they tell me, Baer knocks people out only when they back away from him. I'm not going to back away. I'm not going to give him any free punches at by chin. I'm going to have him miss me. then I'll hit him."

In 24 professional fights Louis has hit 20 men like that, and the 20 all had to be helped away.

Louis will turn his terrific hitting power loose on his sparring partners tomorrow, and after Thursday's ball game will lay off Friday. He will box again on Saturday.

Speculator, N. Y., Sept. 10 (AP).—Max Baer increased his glove work to six rounds today without losing any of the punching accuracy that critics have noticed in his training activities here.

The former heavyweight champion boxed two rounds apeice with Willie McGree, Tony Cancela and Lou Scozza and they caught most everything Max threw.

Baer completed his workout with four rounds of exercises. He tripped the scales at 214 after he had finished his day's chores.

Tauscher to Indians.

Minneapolis, Sept. 10 (AP).—Mike Kelley, president of the Minneapolis American Association Baseball Club, announced the conditional sale today of Pitcher Walter Tauscher to the Cleveland Indians. If he makes good the Tribe will turn over cash and players, it was reported.

to the Eye on the next hole. Parco hit a screamer down the middle, and won that too, as Yates went to pieces and jerked at his irons and stabbed at his putts.

Then I tried mumbling into my beard. That didn't work. I tried concentrating. That is supposed to work. You stare at a guy who is in the process of hitting a chip shot and say to yourself: "Fluff it, fluff it, fluff it." Parco hit his chip shot and laid it 4 inches from the pin for a half on what should have been Yate's hole. I went away from the mat the ninth hole with my man Yates trailing, 3 down. I am pretty badly shaken, as I write this.

I spoke to Mr. C. B. Kelland, the author, who was in the press tent about this and he said Parco probably knew the sign of the horns, and showed it to me. You double your fist and stick out the thumb and pinkie. The evil eye is no good if a guy puts on the sign of the horns. The thing that bothers me is that may aim may have been poor and the eye might have lit in poor Yates. He played as though he were under some sort of spell.

Grove Stops White Sox, 4-3, for 17th

Tietfe Beaten as Chicago Loses Third in Row.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Sept. 10.—After four consecutive defeats, Lefty Grove won his seventeenth game of the season today as the Red Sox whipped the White Sox, 4 to 3, for their third straight victory of the series that ends tomorrow.

As a result the Red Sox moved to within half a game of third place, Cleveland having lost to the Yankees.

The Red Sox were outhit, 10 to 9, but they were able to bunch their hits off Les Tietje. Two runs in the sixth settled the issue for Boston, converting a one-run deficit into a one-run lead.

Crop Prospects Cut But Food Supply Assured

Wheat Yield Figured at Third Smallest Since 1914.

By the Associated Press.

The Agriculture Department yesterday noted sharp reductions in crop prospects during August, but forsaw no shortage either of food or feed supplies.

In its September 1 estimate of conditions, the board said an ample supply of most food crops seemed assured, with certain classes of wheat the only important exceptions. Further rust damage was reported to have lowered the wheat estimate by 13,000,000 bushels, or 2 per cent.

The board said it was increasingly evident the domestic supply of hard red spring wheat of milling quality would be below requirements. The total wheat crop, estimated at 595,000,000 bushels, would be the third smallest since 1904, only the 1933 and 1934 drought years producing less.

Barring early frost, the board said the supply of feed grain on farms should be sufficient for the reduced numbers of livestock.

A tendency to feed to heavier weights because of favorable livestock prices might result in feed supplies on farms at the end of the season being rather light, it added.

The condition of citrus in Florida and other Gulf States was reported considerably below average on September 1, and the board said further damage was done by the tropical storm last week.

Potato production was estimated at 3 per cent smaller than last year but 3 per cent larger than the five-year average, despite a decline in August.

Based on September 1.

The forecast was based on September 1 conditions.

Wheat production a month ago was indicated as 607,678,000 bushels. Last year's crop was 731,000,000 and the 1928-32 average production was 861,000,000.

A month ago the indicated corn crop was 2,272,147,000 bushels. Production last year was 1,377,160,000 and the 1928-32 average production was 2,562,000,000.

Winter wheat production this year was 431,709,000 bushels, compared with 405,552,000 last year and 618,186,000, the 1928-32 average.

Production of all spring wheat was indicated as 162,906,000 bushels, compared with 176,000,000 a month ago, 91,400,000 last year and 242,000,000, the 1928-32 average.

Durum wheat production was indicated as 27,765,000 bushels, compared with 27,000,000 a month ago, 7,100,000 last year, and 54,000,000, the 1928-32 average.

Other spring wheat production was indicated as 135,141,000 bushels, compared with 149,000,000 a month ago, 84,300,000 last year and 188,000,000, the 1928-32 average.

Production of oats was indicated as 1,181,692,000 bushels, compared with 1,187,000,000 a month ago, 526,000,000 last year, and 1,218,000,000, the 1928-32 average.

Wheat Prices Hold Steady

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Strength in foreign markets induced buying of wheat futures here today, but price upturns were held in check by profit taking and hedging.

Grain traders were attentive to world wheat developments, which were largely of a mildly bullish character, but at the same time they exercised caution before release of the September Government crop report, which came after the market had closed.

Wheat gains at one stage during the session ranged up to a cent a bushel, but this upturn was not maintained. The market closed ⅛ off to ⅝ higher, compared with the previous finish; December, 93@93⅝, and corn was ¼@1⅛ up. December, 56⅞@57. Oats gained ⅛@⅞; rye, ¾@⅞, and barley was unchanged to ½ lower.

Month's Bond Drop Is $395,869,264

New York, Sept. 10.—There were 1,493 bond issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange on September 1, with a total market value on that date of $39,061,593,570, a drop of $395,869,264 from the August 1 figure of $39,457,462,834, for 1,501 issues. Par value on September 1 was $43,144,670,444, compared with $43,026,061,990 on August 1.

Retail Trade Forges Ahead 5% in August

September Prospects Are Good, Says Standard Statistics.

New York, Sept. 10.—Retail trade in August was some 5 per cent above the preceding month, and fully 7 per cent ahead of August, 1934, according to the Standard Statistics Co., of New York.

Gains varied considerably among individual retail groups. Mail order volumes continued to show wide increases over 1934, but the increase from July was probably no greater than seasonal. Variety chains are just beginning to reflect increased relief expenditures, and while August figures generally compared favorably with July, they showed little, if any, gain over 1934.

Restaurant chains continue to suffer from the great increase in small eating places. Grocery chains, which have had none too good a record so far this year because of the decline in physical volume induced by the rapid rise in retail prices, are believed to have recorded a moderate reversal of the downward sales trend.

September prospects are generally good. Purchasing power should be stimulated by increasing Federal relief expenditures, continued satisfactory farm income, and higher pay rolls expected to result from expanded general business activity.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Tues.	Mon.
Advances	351	322
Declines	267	308
Unchanged	209	181
Total issues	827	811

Stocks—Strength in the industrial list threw off the strangle hold taken by recent profit taking and pushed the general market to a new 1935 top. Credit for turning back the decline that loomed in early trading was given to motor shares, especially some of the lower priced issues. Turnover was lower than the previous session but still active with 1,992,940 shares.

Bonds—Generally followed stocks with selective demand lifting a number of issues substantially. Industrials also gave the best performance, good earnings being anticipated in most lines. New York traction liens boomed on reports of an agreement. Federals steadied. Transfers off to $12,789,000.

Curb—Weakness in the forenoon gave way to rallying tendencies, the general list closing up fractionally. Sales were off to 239,000 shares.

Grain—Strength in foreign markets was reflected by upturns, but prices were checked by profit taking. Wheat closed ⅛ off to ⅝ higher. Corn was ¼ to 1⅛ higher, while oats were up ⅛ to ⅞.

Cotton—Prices were generally higher on reports of wet weather in the South and net advances were from 9 to 14 points. October closed at 10.50.

Sugar—Raw sugar was inactive, no bids higher than 3.50 and no takers lower than 3.55 or 3.60. Refined unchanged at 5.10 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot was quiet. Santos No. 4 last at 8½ and Rio No. 7 final at 6½.

Bar silver—Unchanged at 65⅜ cents per ounce in New York. In London also unchanged at 29 3-16d (64.88 cents).

Bar gold—Off 6½d to 140s 7½d in London ($34.70).

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that the tenders for $50,000,000 of 273-day Treasury bills, dated September 11, and offered on September 6, amounted to $158,384,000.

The accepted bids ranged in price from 99.902, equivalent to a rate of about 0.129 per cent per annum, to 99.851, equivalent to a rate of about 0.196 per cent annum, on a bank discount basis.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Rally in Late Trading With Automotive Groups Climbing to New High Level—Sterling Rallies—Wheat Rises.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Sept. 10.—Financial markets were a trifle wishy-washy. Stocks spent the morning at fractionally lower levels, revived in early afternoon on a spurt in the steel, motor and electrical shares, and then ended with strength well maintained but without any rush of orders on either side. Turnover in stocks was well under 2,000,000 shares. Bonds were little changed, except in the foreign and one or two local sections. Italian issues were hard hit. New York tractions again spurted. Wheat and cotton improved. December wheat futures at Chicago rose ⅝ of a cent at 93⅝ cents a bushel.

Steel stocks led the afternoon rally in stocks, the Rolling Mill dividend seeming to have a good effect. Motor shares quickly came to the fore and dominated the scene in the late trading. Chrysler and General Motors climbed to new high prices for the year or longer in the last hour, and the group made up about 20 per cent of the day's volume. Packard was the most active, selling in blocks of 1,000 to 10,000 shares. Hudson and Studebaker also found favor. Hudson made the best gain and sold at a new top.

Some miscellaneous stock to attract attention were Burroughs Adding Machine and National Cash Register. Both sold at new high levels. Gotham and Real Silk Hosiery also went up in good style. Other members of the textile group to show more activity were Keyser, Phoenix and Munsingwear. Motor accessories were strong and active, with their leaders. Budd, Murray and Briggs were the features.

Owens Illinois Glass, which lost 7½ points yesterday, recovered more than half of it today. Traction shares continued strong. Hazel Atlas Glass and Corn Exchange Bank gave up more than 2 points each. Irregular prices, with a tendency toward weakness, were noted in rails, utilities, amusements, oils, rail equipments, rubbers and foods. Metals, especially the coppers, were active and strong. Howe Sound advanced a point on an extra dividend distribution. Farm implements and chemicals hardened.

Capital Flow.

Money market rates were unchanged, but the price which the Treasury pays on its discount bills continues to harden. The latest allotment was made at an average rate of 0.176 per cent, compared with 0.151 on September 4. It was the highest charge since last April. Excess bank reserves, with the drop in the past week, because of the holiday cash circulation, were still above $2,000,000,000. Security loans of reporting member banks in 91 leading cities rose sharply, doubtless a month-end operation and reflecting partially the new Treasury refunding offering. Commercial loans contracted a little.

This year the usual expansion in commercial borrowing has not taken place to speak of, partly because of the strong cash position of most corporations and business men, partly because of Government aid in the financing of the crops and even of business enterprise, and partly because business has not increased much. Although a considerable autumn rise in business activity is confidently expected in many quarters, gold again is beginning to flow to this country, adding to excess reserves, and the Treasury is continuing to operate along that line. No important rise in money rates is to be anticipated.

Meanwhile this country is believed to have a moderate influx of foreign capital, some of it doubtless going into stocks. Along with that the refunding movement in Government and corporation bonds is constantly adding to the stream of fnuds flowing into low-grade bonds and sound common stocks. Under the circumstances no great setback in stock and bond prices seems likely, in spite of short term ups and downs, unless some major obstacle to upset confidence be encountered.

Dividends Rising.

Foreign exchanges were quiet, with the dollar weaker against sterling, but still high enough above the franc to warrant further gold shipments. Sterling at this time should decline, a seasonal movement, but perhaps funds have been going from Paris to London as well as to New York, and dollars doubtless are under continual pressure as a result of silver purchases.

Trade news was of no great moment, except that it was symptomatic of conditions already well known. Some dividend increases and one important resumption, that of a steel company, were announced. The leading steelmaker reported a sharp rise in its shipments for last month, and a Federal bureau reported a climb in Federal financial aid to building construction. Railroad traffic and certain other weekly indices of business, to appear before the end of this week, will cover last week's holiday interruption and consequently will be down as against the previous week.

Profits.

Many of the commission houses have had excellent profits this summer, and while in most places little change in personnel and pay rolls has taken place, the outlook from the partners' stand looks much rosier. The brokerage commission business on the New York Stock Exchange is no slouch of a livelihood with daily volume of 1,500,000 to 2,500,000 shares, and it is not surprising that the price of memberships has jumped to the highest level since the spring of 1934.

Steel.

The rise in United States Steel Corporation's shipments in August was considerable as compared with July and nearly 60 per cent above those of the same month of last year, when the industry was at a low ebb. Publication of the figures at noon had no perceptible effect marketwise, as the recent reports of rising operations had prepared the market for sharp gains.

Fleming Urges Banks Regain Lost Market

Tells Financial Ad Group That Private Credit Is Preferred.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

A plea that private banking recapture the tremendous credit field now being handled through Government agencies was made yesterday by Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank and first vice president of the American Bankers Association, speaking before delegates to the Financial Adevrtisers convention at Atlantic City.

Fleming asserted that agencies of the Government at the present time are extending credit in a volume greater than one-quarter of the total loans made by all the licensed banks in the country.

While functioning in this capacity the Government is largely financed through the banks, Fleming declared. "The circle by which the Government extends credits to the public at a reasonable rate and is financed itself through the banks at the lowest rate of interest in history is striking at the very heart of bank earnings.

Prefer Banks.

"It is my belief," Fleming said, "that the people prefer to deal with private institutions, carefully supervised by national or State authorities, rather than through Federal agencies which cannot function as elastically as the private organizations.

Fleming advised that bankers should explore the possibility of handling these credits to the public directly at a reasonable rate of interest, thereby helping the Government to reduce its expenses and in turn to augment the banks' earnings.

He stated that there is existent today a great opportunity to bring about in the public consciousness a realization of the fact that the banks are now in a better position to serve the public than ever before.

Hear Complaints.

"We often hear complaints that the Government is participating in business. Let us, therefore, make it possible for the Government to get out of business," Fleming advised, "through the broadened facilities of the Federal Reserve System and the restored public confidence in the safety of banks. The high percentage of liquidity is no longer needed and banks can adopt a broader, long range viewpoint in dealing with their customers."

Fleming lauded the constructive work that has been done in the educational and public relations work carried on by the American Bankers Assocaition. He urged strongly that program be adopted to bring about a still greater understanding on the part of the public of the true function of banking.

Quits Colonial Trust Co.

Effective yesterday, directors of the Colonial Trust Co. of Baltimore accepted the resignation of Irving Adams as president of the company. No successor was named to Mr. Adams, and directors declined to give any comment.

It is understood in informed quarters that there have been differences between two groups of stockholders which resulted in Mr. Adams' withdrawal.

The board named Loring A. Cover, a director, to be chairman, filling the vacancy which has existed since the retirement of W. G. Bowdoin some time ago. Lewis R. Lemke was named a vice president.

Ghinger Elected.

John J. Ghinger, State bank commissioner of Maryland since 1933, has been elected president of the National Central Bank in Baltimore.

Ghinger's election was announced after a meeting of the board of directors. He will succeed William E. Katenkamp, who was named chairman of the board.

The bank commissioner plans to present his resignation to Gov. Nice immediately with the request he be relieved of his duties as soon as possible.

Business Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Washington Sales Representatives Association, George C. Cook, president, was held yesterday at the Lafayette Hotel. Resolutions were adopted co-operating with the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America, Inc., in the matter of discontinuing the practice of buying advertising in dinner programs, tickets for farewell parties, etc.

Circulations Gain With Better Trade

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—Newspaper circulation figures show a decided upturn and many have reached their 1929 peaks, George Moffett, of the Milwaukee Sentinel, president of the Central States Circulation Managers Association, told that body today. He said the higher circulation figures reflected a better wage level, more active retail and wholesale trade and a general improvement in business conditions.

Textile Trade Recovers With Vigorous Rise

NRA Demise, Tax Ruling and Cotton Held Chief Factors.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 10.—The textile outlook has registered spectacular improvement within the last few weeks and prospects for fall are now most encouraging, states Douglas G. Woolf, editor of Textile World.

"The principal reason for the change has been a succession of developments tending to remove uncertainty," states Mr. Woolf. "First, the NRA demise, with its thread of chaos, was met successfully. Then the processing-tax clause tangle resulting from the Hoosac Mills case decision was straightened out. Finally the cotton loan problem was solved—and in a way that represents a constructive step forward out of the AAA morass. The net result of all this has been increased confidence, less fear.

"Even more dramatic still has been the industry's changed attitude on price policy. Twice in August, for example, a general advance was made in cotton goods—and each at a time when such psychology was needed. This action was particularly welcome since previous prices had represented loss, instead of profit, to the industry.

"Other branches of textiles are also moving to higher ground, and away from profitless conditions. In wool, consumption is the best in many years—and new lines—opened at an advance—have been well received. Raw silk has continued its sharp rise. The price advance in rayon has been a constructive factor. In knit goods, a price rise in hosiery, prosperity conditions in outerwear, and satisfactory outlook in underwear—all add up to strength.

"The important thing to remember," Mr. Woolf concludes, "is that there is considerably more than seasonal improvement in the textile situation. In other words, the upturn, which usually comes in that much-heralded period, 'after Labor Day,' is not being blown up by optimists into a pseudo boom. On the contrary, there is every sound indication of better-than-normal textile activity this fall."

Power Shovel Pilot Is Artist At His Trade

Job Something Like Flying, He Says, Only Noise Is Worse.

By the Associated Press.

New York—It is given to few men to scoop up the pavement with a bang and a clatter in front of the Ritz, on swanky Madison avenue, riding high and proud in the caboose of a gasoline power shovel.

That is W. J. "Bill" Vandewater's privilege. He manipulates the huge shovel with such skill and nonchalance that the noon-hour crowds stop and gaze at him, more interested in the way he loads trucks with hunks of asphalt than in the fact that mid-town Madison avenue is being repaved.

A first attempt to interview him missed fire.

"No time today," he shouted from the caboose. "But come back in a couple of days and I'll give you a story."

Vandewater is an artist. When he climbs aboard and grasps the levers that operate the shovel, he seems aware of this, too. He admits frankly that he likes the crowds that form when he starts his labors, that stand gaping at him and his shovel and that represent—to judge from their appearance—the upper classes.

His Public Varies.

"Sometimes they can't see enough," he said, "till they get where they're liable to be killed, they're that curious. Of course there's a difference in crowds, depending on the city and location."

He said this with the air of a man who knows his crowds.

"If I'd known you were coming today, I'd have gotten the stenographer to type out a story for you. I think I could do one myself, because I know what my experiences have been. If you could wait till Tuesday, say, I could get it up for you."

"How is it up there?" he was asked.

He's Been Around.

"It's something like flying," he replied. "I've been up many times. But it's rougher than a plane, although the noise is practically the same. Well, I might say, the noise of a plane is pleasanter."

"What did you think of Wiley Post's death?"

"I knew him," came the ready answer. "I guess he was caught off guard for a split second, and it doesn't take any more than that to catch a man, even a great flier like Wiley. I've been in some tough spots myself. Worked in northern Ontario—that's Canada—and ran into a forest fire that killed 35 men. We were cut off from outside communication for weeks.

"Once, while I was in the caboose, the whole thing tipped over, right off a pier. Sure, this work has its risky side.

Piles Trade for 20 Years.

"I have had 20 years, all told, in the construction field. I've been in every country. If I only had my clippings here. Do you think you have enough for a story?"

He was assured.

"It's a pleasure to me to give interviews," he said, "so long as I have the time. Now, I guess I had better be getting back to work."

Vandewater climbed back into the caboose. The engine roared, the big shovel gobbled up mouthfuls of asphalt, the crowd pushed closer. He sat there proudly, suavely, aware that his technique was admired by all who saw him—with the possible exception of the stately doorman at the Ritz, who seemed to resent the din and the dust.

Name Links to America Grow Scarcer in Paris

Paris (AP).—French family names famous in American history are fewer in the latest Paris directory.

No Champlain and no Joliet is listed, but there are 27 Cartiers, not descendants of the great explorer, however, for he died without issue.

There is only one Lafayette, the Count J. de Lafayette, but there are three Rochambeaux, a marquis and two counts.

In addition, there is a Count Robert de la Salle, probably of the family of the explorer of the Mississippi, and another untitled De la Salle, an attorney.

There are two Marquettes, believed by French genealogists to be collateral descendants of the Jesuit explorer, and one Montcalm, a marquis like the general defeated by Wolfe at Quebec.

Third Tooth in ThirdSet Is Cut by Octogenarian

Oakland, Calif. (AP).—White-haired, bewhiskered Edward M. Taylor, 82, is feeling very "spring-chickenish" these days. He says he has just cut the third tooth in his third set of teeth.

"My milk teeth came in normally," he said, "and were displaced by the usual second set. For some reason or other, all of my second set is gone, and just a few months ago I noticed the first of the third set. It was an upper.

"A few weeks later, another upper came in, and now there's another one. Maybe there'll be more before long."

While not an unheard of thing, the cutting of a third set of teeth, particularly by an octogenarian, is a rarity, dentists say.

It Takes Carnival Order To Revive Whaling Days

San Diego, Calif. (AP).—The days when San Diego was center of the Pacific Coast whaling industry were revived for one day when a 50-foot, 60-ton finback whale was brought in by the killer ship Clemente.

But instead of being cleaned for its bone and boiled for oil, the whale was embalmed to take its place as a waterfront carnival attraction. The killer ship patrolled the ocean 35 miles offshore before being able to fill its order for an exhibition whale.

Life on the Farm 'Not What it Was'

Raleigh, N. C. (AP).—Life on the farm isn't what it used to be.

In many ways it has improved, but in others it has lost ground, according to M. Taylor Matthews, assistant State supervisor of the plan for rural research conducted by the ERA and North Carolina agricultural experiment station.

In former years, Matthews said, rural life was brightened by events which broke the routine of living—family visits, camp meetings, Sunday meetings with dinner on the ground, community singings and serenading newly married couples.

Rural folks have less enthusiasm for these things nowadays and many of them are falling into discard, Matthews says he found in a recent study.

Rice Planters Use Airplanes To See Fields

Low Cost, Mass-Production Method Is Developed in California.

Sacramento, Calif., (AP).—Considerable liberties have been taken by farmers in Sacramento Valley with the ancient practice of raising rice.

They're using airplanes to seed the rice fields.

Five years of experimentation have demonstrated the practicality, from a low-cost, mass-production standpoint, of sowing from the sky. . . . And it's foiled the hungry blackbirds that relish a meal of newly planted rice.

George P. Dozier, manager of a large farming company, says the airplane method has been so successful that of the 25,000 acres of rice in Glenn County 20,000 acres are sown by plane.

300 Acres a Day.

Thousands of acres in four surrounding counties also are planted by plane. Dozier says a skilful pilot can sow 300 acres a day. Fifty acres was a good average by the old machine or hand methods.

The new method provides a thicker stand of rice, Dozier has found. Last year his company averaged 70 sacks to the acre in a normal growing year, compared to an average of 55 sacks by old methods.

Dozier says airplane sowing "chokes" the weeds and permits the fields to be flooded at the time of seeding to keep blackbirds from devastating the newly planted acres.

Mudhens have appeared, but Dozier explains they can be shot more easily than blackbirds.

Planes Fly Low.

Seeding costs between 75 cents and $1 an acre and a landing field must be provided for the flier. A plane can carry 600 pounds of seed each trip. At the bottom of an empty passenger compartment of an open, two-seated biplane, a chute with a fan is installed, the seed pouring through it and being spread out by the slipstream of the propeller.

The pilot flies at an altitude of 30 to 50 feet and is steered by two flagmen stationed at one end of a field. They stand 33 feet apart. At the far end of the field stands another man to signal the pilot so that the chute can be closed at the proper time without waste of seed.

It takes a flier about six minutes to sow nearly five acres, the pilot criss-crossing the field to insure an even seeding.

There have been crack-ups because of the hazardous altitude at which the airplanes fly, but this has not served to stop the method from growing rapidly in this extensive rice-raising country.

Whenever you hear anyone mention the "Result Number," he is talking about Post Classified Ads—National 4200.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

A NON-SINKABLE battleship, one that needed no navigation, engines, sails—a battleship that was as immovable as a mountain peak—a battleship that was, in fact, a mountain peak, but nevertheless a battleship commanded by a naval captain and manned by a naval crew—this was H. M. S. Ascension, officially a ship in the British fleet but actually an island in the South Atlantic.

The island lies almost due south of Liberia on the Western Coast of Africa. It is about midway between the eastmost coast of Brazil and the west coast of the Belgian Congo. South and east of it about 800 miles lies St. Helena.

The British first occupied Ascension about 1815 because it was then feared that the island might be used as a base of operations for forces attempting to rescue the exiled emperor. The island was in charge of the Admiralty with officers and men drawn from naval forces. It was listed officially in records as a warship.

It remained a warship for more than 100 years, even through the World War. In 1922 the Admiralty turned the island over to the Colonial office—and it became just another British island possession.

Ivan IV, Czar of Russia, got the idea somewhere that fleas were good for one's health. He immediately ordered the city of Moscow to deliver a measure full for medicine. City officials replied that they did not have the fleas to send him, and added that even if they did have them, it would be impossible to get the fleas to stop jumping long enough to measure them. For the impertinence, Ivan fined the city 7,000 rubles.

Winnie Winkle, The Breadwinner — Last Man Wins

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Morgan Baker.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 9.—Wild cheering by delegates to the American Federation of Government Employes convention greeted the announcement by Representative William I. Sirovich, that President Roosevelt gives his "earnest and sincere approval" of the Sirovich omnibus bill.

BAKER.

Sirovich, one of several speakers in the all-day opening session of oratory, was frequently interrupted by cheers. One of the loudest outbursts came when the New Yorker scored Luther C. Steward, president, National Federation of Federal Employes, A. F. G. E. rival, for "walking out on the Government workers and trying to sabotage the employe bills."

On the platform, Sirovich turned to E. Claude Babcock, A. F. G. E. president, and Col. Charles I. Stengle, A. F. G. E. executive officer, and said:

Talked With Roosevelt.

"My dear Claude and you, Col. Stengle, it might interest you to know that last Wednesday I spent an hour and a half with the President of the United States, Franklin D. Roosevelt, at Hyde Park. I went over with him the principles embodied in this legislation and he told me to convey through Mr. Babcock and Mr. Stengle to all the delegates of this organization that this measure has his earnest and sincere approval."

Confidence was expressed that the Sirovich bill, which was defeated in the Senate in the last week of Congress and since broken up into four separate measures, would be passed early in the next sesison.

While the convention got off to a harmonious start, many delegates appeared impatient to get on to the business of electing new officers. Opponents of Babcock centered their support around Miss Esther Penn, secretary, who is slated for removal by the Babcock forces, and Paul David, former college professor, who is the leading candidate for Babcock's position. Informal polls, however, indicate that the Babcock ticket will be elected substantially.

Hit Labor Conditions.

Babcock's legislative and lobbying tactics are expected to come under fire Thursday, when the rules committee will likely permit the election. The rules committee, which had set Tuesday for the election, changed the date to the latter day. Both sides claim advantage in the delay. The rule for the change was unexpected.

Sirovich and another speaker digressed from Federal personnel problems Monday to lambast labor conditions in the South.

Sirovich said industrial workers were regarded as "coolies" in the South and hit alleged Southern attitude of oppressing labor.

George Googe, Southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, called the South the "Siberia" of labor conditions. Thousands of workers in the South have been shut out and blacklisted for their trades union activities, he declared. But, he pointed to the wide organization progress in that section in recent months, particularly among all classes of Tennessee Valley Authority employes.

Green "Too Busy."

William Green, American Federation of Labor president, scheduled to speak, was "too occupied with pressing business elsewhere" to come to Cincinnati, James A. Wilson, member of the Cincinnati City Council and former A. F. L. vice president, explained. Wilson deplored the N. F. F. E.'s withdrawal from the A. F. L. and took a hearty swing at radical activities.

Mayor Russell Wilson extended greetings to the delegates and pointed with pride to the city's model nonpartisan civil service system.

A telegram from Marvin McIntyre was read, expressing regrets at the President's inability to accept the convention invitation.

Leaders of the Babcock "harmony" ticket are trying to squelch a proposed resolution, reported to be aimed at J. A. Brown, mail equipment shop; John Donovan, NRA, and others for their alleged radical activities.

Legion Celebration.

All former service men of the Treasury Department have been invited to a celebration at Musicians Hall, 1105 Sixteenth street northwest, at 8 p. m. today, according to an announcement of Treasury Post, No. 35, American Legion. A feature of tonight's program will be the election of officers and the inauguration of a membership drive.

Members of the Athletic Association of the Federal Bureau of Investigation who are interested in dramatics have formed a committee to consider tentative plans for producing plays. The group hopes to sponsor the production of a full length play late in November and possible two more dramatic productions during the winter.

France Blames Drivers As Auto Deaths Triple

Paris (AP).—France is becoming alarmed at the increase in fatal automobile accidents, more than four-fifths of which are attributed to careless drivers.

Joseph Paganon, minister of the interior, who is planning measures to reduce road risk, said three times as many people were killed in automobile accidents in 1934 as ten years ago.
